

To the Victors Go the Spoils

One of the most colorful events of the year-round high school sports program, the seventh annual Inter-High School Track and Field Championships concluded Friday with the presentation of trophies at Vic High's Memorial Stadium. The host school's co-captains,

John Whan and Bev Koski, proudly hold the Roy Jones Memorial Trophy, for the meet championship, presented to them by J. F. K. English, municipal inspector of schools. (See other pictures, story, Page 9.)

FINAL ASSAULT OVER WEEK-END

Everest Party Plans Two-Pronged Attempt

KATMANDU, Nepal (Reuters)—Four picked climbers of the British Everest expedition plan to make a two-pronged "leap frog" attempt to conquer 29,002-foot Mount Everest this week-end, according to reports reaching here today by runner from the expedition's base.

The four climbers, in two parties of two, were expected to make their assaults on the summit today and Sunday if the weather holds.

Both parties would set out from Camp No. 7 at about 25,000 feet. It was planned that two climbers would set up camp No. 8 on a ridge about 2,000 feet from the summit, where they would spend the night. The other two, equipped with the latest "closed circuit" oxygen equipment, would by-pass them and try to get to the peak and back in a day.

If they were beaten back, the second party, who will have spent the night in a tiny bivouac tent, would make their attempt Sunday morning.

They are equipped with the older-type oxygen equipment, which, though heavier, would serve them longer in the high altitudes.

If both parties fail it is expected the whole expedition will withdraw to the advanced base camp to prepare for a further attempt.

CARRY FLAGS

Booth parties will carry with them British, Nepalese and United Nations flags to be planted side by side on the summit.

To cover the last 3,000 feet to the summit and back in a single day would mean a tremendous feat of endurance for the two climbers selected.

In the rarified atmosphere on the mountain, extreme cold and perhaps soft snow, every step would mean a great effort, sapping at the men's will power.

Mountaineers say much depends on the working of the oxygen equipment.

be out of pocket because of the Rolston Formula rejection, was a "film flim" according to the former minister.

"Mr. Bennett, with tongue-in-cheek, said his government was going to give the city $156,000 if we hadn't stopped him," Mr. Straith recounted.

"What he didn't say was that before they did that they were going to steal $200,000 which rightfully is coming to this city through the 3 per cent sales tax. No, he didn't tell you that. He wouldn't want you to see we'd be losing $44,000 on the deal."

Mr. Straith pointed out as part of the Rolston Formula Socreds were going to cut off payment to municipalities of their share of sales tax revenue as of next December, three months before the end of the fiscal year.

To Victoria, Mr. Straith estimated, this would mean a direct loss of $200,000.

Gunmen Loot Edmonton Bank

Hooded Thugs Escaped With Money Estimated Between $20-$25,000

(Compiled From CP, BUP Dispatches)

EDMONTON — Four black-hooded gunmen today held up and robbed the Jasper Avenue Treasury Branch of the Alberta Government and escaped with an unknown amount of money. One official report said the bandits made off with an estimated $20,000 to $25,000.

Assistant bank manager Gordon Self said the four entered the branch 40 minutes after the 9 a.m. opening. One bandit stationed himself at the door. Another pointed a gun at Mr. Self and two others vaulted a counter.

One man rifled a teller's cage, holding Madeleine Schreiffels at gunpoint. No shots were fired. The men were in the building about five minutes and escaped in a car waiting outside. They wore coveralls, jackets and black hoods, Mr. Self said.

SCUFFLED WITH THUGS
R. E. Stark, an accountant, was in the vault when the bandits entered. He emerged from the vault and saw only the one man rifling the teller's cage. Mr. Stark scuffled with the man and suffered head and face bruises when the bandit struck him with his fist.

Only the one teller's cage was entered.

Bank officials could give no accurate description of the men but said all were "in their 30s."

The Royal Canadian Mounted Police was called into the manhunt as it was believed the three gunmen fleeing in a late-model green car were heading out of the city for northern Alberta.

City police Chief Reg Jennings said first reports indicated "at least $25,000" was stolen in the robbery within three blocks of city police headquarters and on Edmonton's main street, but the loot might be considerably higher.

"We won't know yet as the branch is checking now," he said.

The RCMP alerted all its detachments in northern Alberta to watch for the get-away car.

Royal Serenade

Like thousands of young ladies the world over, Princess Margaret Rose is an enthusiastic fan of U.S. radio singer Eddie Fisher. At a recent charity ball, in London's Dorchester Hall, Fisher sang three songs especially for the Princess. Observers said she looked happier than at any time since the death of her father.

WIRE BRIEFS

Trans-Canada Road Buried Under Slide

FLOOD, B.C. (CP)—Near-vertical walls of a trans-Canada highway cut, caved in with a roar early today, burying the road and CNR tracks under tons of rock and mud.

The slide, in the Fraser Canyon, was 20 feet deep and some 200 yards long. RCMP reported.

$2,400 B.C. Robbery

PORT COQUITLAM, B.C. (CP)—Burglars escaped with jewelry valued at $2,400 and $400 in cash early today after a robbery at Guests' Variety and Jewelry store here.

First Negro Guest

TOKYO (AP)—Japan's imperial court today had a negro guest for the first time in its 2,600-year history.

Marian Anderson, famed American contralto, sang negro spirituals and classical German songs for about 30 minutes for Empress Nagako and her two children—Prince Yoshi and Princess Suga.

Showdown Korea Plan

TOKYO (AP)—Lieut. Gen. William K. Harrison is ready to return to the Panmunjom truce table with what high United Nations command sources today called a "showdown Korean armistice plan."

The sources said the chief Allied negotiator will issue a "last chance" ultimatum to the Reds when the talks resume Monday after an eight-day break.

Refugees Fired On

BERLIN (AP)—Communist police fired four shots at a refugee truck on the border between East and West Berlin today, wounding a woman passer-by in the Russian sector.

Sons Answer Socred's 'Fooling Over' Policy

Premier W. A. C. Bennett's warning to Radical Doukhobors that the "fooling around" is over was answered Friday night, by a series of house fires in the Kootenay area, RCMP reported here today.

Details of the fires were not immediately available, but first reports said two houses had been destroyed in Krestova village, headquarters of the radical Sons of Freedom Doukhobors, and five at Goose Creek. All were Sons of Freedom dwellings.

Krestova, in the Kootenays near Nelson, B.C., 35 miles east of Vancouver, has been the scene of many fires over the years.

Fire is a Doukhobor form of protest, and it is not uncommon for the "Sons" to put the torch to their own homes.

Premier Bennett issued his warning to the radical Doukhobors Friday when he announced an eight-point program in an effort to settle a problem that has plagued British Columbia for 50 years.

A relocation plan has been under study, with the possibility of the Doukhobors emigrating to Central America. The religious sect numbers about 2,000 of the some 10,000 Doukhobors in the Kootenays.

Fresh Flood Threat Faced In Louisiana

15,000 Homeless; $10 Million Damage

LAKE CHARLES, La. (AP)—A sleepless weatherman warned today the crest-swollen Calcasieu River would keep pouring flood waters another four or five days through this city and eastern outskirts where 15,000 persons fled their homes.

The flood-crippled area, with hundreds of homes in backwater up to window level, counted damage at $10,000,000.

Week-long floods throughout Louisiana have caused a loss estimated at more than $100,000,000 and at least eight drownings. No casualties were reported here, but residents were advised to get typhoid shots.

While the creeping backwaters swirled through one-third of this southwest Louisiana city, the waters spilling into low-lying neighborhoods appeared to be leveling off, but not falling.

MAY USE DYNAMITE

A decision was expected on whether to relieve conditions by dynamiting holes in the east-west highway. The road, built on an embankment in swamp-land, dams the south-bound flood waters.

Orange, Tex., an industrial city of 10,000 some 35 miles southwest of here on Highway 90, was threatened by the rising waters of the Sabine River which divides the two states.

Weatherman Paul Cook said, "Lake Charles will just have to sit there four or five more days with this flood at or near its peak."

He said an immense amount of southward flowing water was still piled up in miles of swamp-lands north of the city.

Accident-Free Motorists Win Insurance Cut

Accident-free Vancouver Island motorists today can buy collision insurance for less money.

B.C. Underwriters Association has extended its 20 per cent no-claims discount to collision coverage. Heretofore the "safe driver" bonus applied only to property damage and public liability coverages.

Cost of $100 deductible collision insurance on late model autos will be cut by $8.20 for Vancouver Island motorists; $50 deductible will cost $10 less.

The no-claims discount is retroactive to April 1, Percy Baird, Vancouver, B.C. Underwriters Association secretary, said this forenoon.

This is the second no-claims-for-three-years bonus granted by the auto insurance companies this year.

On April 1 cost of public liability and property damage insurance was cut 20 per cent provided the car was used for pleasure only, was driven by no one under 25, and the insured had a three-year accident-free record.

Weathermen Fail to Warn Of Tornado

TORONTO (BUP)—No tornado warning was issued in southwestern Ontario—Thursday night—because authorities feared it might create panic, a weather office spokesman said today.

Forecaster K. T. McLeod said another reason was that it was mathematically impossible to predict where the twister would hit.

(A number of tornado victims in Sarnia said the first indication they had of the approaching big blow came from the U.S. Weather Bureau in Michigan which issued an urgent warning.)

McLeod said the weather office knew Thursday morning that conditions were conducive to tornadoes because of instability of air masses.

SC Principles Felt in Heart

WINNIPEG (CP)—Rev. E. G. Hansell, Social Credit Member of Parliament for Macleod, said Friday night that party supporters don't have to understand the principles of Social Credit as long as they feel it in their hearts.

He spoke at a campaign meeting in support of Social Credit candidates in the June 8 Manitoba election.

Liberals, CCF Attack Monetary Reform

Socreds Undermine Prosperity, Says Laing

Special to The Times

BURNS LAKE—Turning back the advances of Social Credit in B.C. would be the greatest service the Liberal party could do for Canada.

Liberal Leader Arthur Laing told a campaign audience this as he spoke here Friday in support of former MLA Cecil Steele, who is trying to replace Social Creditier Cyril Shefford in Omineca on June 9.

The country would be in dire trouble if the Socreds made further gains in Western Canada, he warned. Soon they might approximate the number of Progressive Conservatives at Ottawa.

"Then, with the Conservatives sinking and Social Credit rising," he said, "you'd have a first-class emergency."

He linked his criticism of Social Credit money theories with the fact that "Canada is now attracting capital from all parts of the world."

"Canada is in the forefront of nations which can benefit from new investment," he said.

"Social Credit is undermining the foundations of our prosperity by sapping off prospective capital with their fiscal theories."

Speaking in an area of small logging operations the Liberal leader said he was happy "this province finally is being developed in depth."

He told groups of small operators here and at Vanderhoof and Fort St. James their problems would get particular attention from a Royal Commission on forestry which Liberals would set up.

No more forest management licenses would be granted to big operators until such a commission reported, he said.

Gibbs Says Theory Means Dictatorship

Social Credit monetary reform theories were examined by P. A. Gibbs, Oak Bay Liberal candidate, Friday night at Cadboro Bay Scout Hall, and his conclusion was: The system is operable only under a Fascist dictatorship.

He quoted an Alberta university professor who wrote in the Winnipeg press that "true Social Credit would mean the abolition of the party system and the installation of a removable civil service."

The professor added that the Socred idea is based on "restriction and regulation" and that its proponents feel the majority of the people haven't the intelligence to direct their own affairs.

Mr. Gibbs, a chartered accountant, was especially scornful of "state control of credit, investments and wages."

He said that at a recent Socred meeting Mr. Bennett admitted that he accepts the federal monetary theories of the party . . . "and the Socred theory rests precisely on dictatorship, as was shown in the last session."

Hope them British Everest climbers make it this time. They likely hev as good a chance as some fellers nearer home who are climbin' way over their heads these days.

Wack wishes they'd git another name fer funny money. How about cococo currency or leapin' lucre, or even crazy cash?

Machines may be better'n humans at a lot o' things, but they still ain't got a vote.

Letter Bomb Explodes In Belfast Post Office

Irish Republican Sympathizers Blamed for Blast; No Injuries

BELFAST (AP)—A "letter bomb" exploded with a loud bang in Belfast's main post office today. There were no injuries, but police immediately began a search of the mails that netted six similar packages.

Police also were investigating an explosion that destroyed a mail box Friday outside the post office at Killeen in County Down. At the time of the blast, officials said they believed the charge had been placed by Irish Republican sympathizers protesting plans for celebrating the June 2 Coronation.

The six northern counties of Ireland are still a part of the United Kingdom despite Irish claims that they should be incorporated into the Irish Republic.

BRODIE TWIN BOOKED FOR TV

CHICAGO (AP)—Slamese twin Rodney Dee Brodie is to appear on a commercially sponsored television show. The 20-month-old boy, separated from his head-joined brother, Roger Lee, in a history-making operation Dec. 17, will appear on more than 30 TV stations. Time and network on which he will appear will be announced later.

JERSEY FIRE DAMAGE TOLL $1,000,000

Lightning Cause Of Destruction

ELIZABETH, N.J. (UP)—One of the worst fires in 30 years leveled a huge semi-circular building near the heart of downtown Elizabeth today causing damage estimated at almost $1,000,000.

The general alarm blaze touched off by a bolt of lightning at the height of a torrential rainstorm, brought out virtually all of the city's fire-fighting force, including off-duty firemen.

The 220-foot-wide brick structure housed the 20-story Elizabeth Bowling Center, a branch office of International Business Machine and an Acme supermarket. Firemen said the alleys, a cocktail lounge, luncheonette, recreation room, lockers, storage facilities, IBM equipment and the entire food stock of the supermarket were destroyed.

Two fire captains were overcome by dense clouds of smoke which blacked out the entire area and reached into the suburbs of Newark, eight miles away. Both firemen were treated at the scene and returned to duty.

The flames, fed by strong southwest winds, raged out of control for more than three hours and was still smoldering six hours after they broke out on the roof of the building.

Firemen said the roof collapsed quickly, dumping tons of scalding water on firemen who had worked their way inside in an effort to save the first floor. The weight of rubble collapsed the second floor and left only a shell standing. Later, the sides buckled.

Auto Workers Demand Raise On GM Pattern

DETROIT (AP)—The United Auto Workers (CIO) turned the heat on the remainder of the auto industry's big three today to gain the same wage concessions it got from General Motors Corporation Friday.

Walter P. Reuther, president of the CIO and the UAW, already had said Chrysler and Ford would be asked to alter their five-year wage contracts if General Motors did. GM historically has been the pattern-setter.

After GM agreed to alter its contract—which it legally could have refused to do until mid-1955—Reuther remarked, "I hope other companies will catch on to the idea real quick."

The concessions granted by GM raised the average wage of GM's 350,000 employees across the country to $2.05 hourly.

700,000 INVOLVED
Around 700,000 other UAW members are employed by other auto makers and major suppliers.

Shortly after the GM-UAW agreement was announced, James B. Carey, president of the Electrical Workers CIO announced GM had given 40,000 members of his union similar concessions.

Canadian textile mills now supply about 70 per cent of domestic requirements.

MEMORIAL VOYAGE

Pretty Widow Ends Lonely Sea Passage

NASSAU, Bahamas (BUP)—Mrs. Anne Davidson, attractive 38-year-old British widow, has arrived aboard her 23-foot sloop Felicity Ann in which she started a solo crossing of the Atlantic May 17, 1952, from Plymouth, England. Her final destination is Miami, Fla.

When customs officials boarded the boat they found Mrs. Davidson asleep. She had had no sleep in four days. Her last port of call before Nassau was St. Thomas, Virgin Islands, where she sailed April 20.

Apart from being tired, she appeared in good health after almost continuous sailing for more than a year. She said she would remain here until rested and then would proceed to Miami.

Ever since her husband was killed in a mishap during a similar Atlantic crossing with several years ago, Mrs. Davidson has dreamed of completing the trip by herself, in his memory.

Wounded War Veteran Held For Slaying

NORTH BAY, Ont. (BUP)—Marvin J. Hutson, 29, a war veteran with head wounds, was returned here today to face charges in the murder of three-year-old Susan Hutchins whose almost nude body was found in a thicket by three children.

District Coroner Dr. I. Joyal said the girl had been criminally assaulted and then beaten over the head.

Hutson was arrested at Cochran in a Canadian National Railway restaurant Friday after provincial police issued a province-wide alarm. He offered no resistance.

The girl's mother, Mrs. Frank Hutchins, said she left Susan in the care of Hutson, an acquaintance of her husband, while she went shopping Wednesday. Both were gone when she returned.

Hutson, an army veteran who has a steel plate in his skull, was acquitted in 1948 of the axe slaying of his mother, Mrs. Lucy Hutson, whose body was found in the cellar of their Timmins home. The judge told the jury it had taken an "extraordinarily lenient view" of the case.

Chinese Reds Mark Victoria Day With Own 'Observances'

By BILL ROSS

IN KOREA (CP)—The Chinese Communists today apparently had their own Victoria Day observances.

They actually hoisted a Canadian red ensign over their own positions and tried to arrange for an exchange of bodies.

Five white placards five feet high, each with one large black letter, spelled out the word "Peace" on a hillside 600 yards in front of the United Nations positions.

The Canadian ensign billowed briskly above the display.

The enemy beamed two loud-speaker transmissions to the United Nations troops. The first said they had taken some corpses into no man's land and would permit unarmed United Nations forces to remove them under a white flag. The second said: "We are coming out with a white flag—do not shoot."

The local commander ordered his troops to withhold their fire. But unfortunately one tank broke the silence.

There was no intention of having any local dealings with the Chinese, but the commander was interested in seeing whether the enemy actually would come out. They did not.

SCANDINAVIAN PLANE TRIES COMMERCIAL FLIGHT VIA POLE

OSLO, Norway (AP)—A Scandinavian Airlines plane took off here today on what was believed to be the first commercial flight from Europe to Tokyo via the north polar region.

Carrying 40 workers assigned to relief duty at the Norwegian field hospital in Korea, the airliner Hjalmar Viking left Oslo's international airport at nearby Gardermoen at 10 a.m. (4 a.m., CDT).

Actual flying time for the 18,750-mile trip is estimated at 33 hours, but the plane was scheduled to stop at Anchorage, Alaska, for 16 hours and at Shemya, in the Aleutian Islands. It was due in Tokyo at 11 p.m. (9 a.m., CDT), May 25.

A Scandinavian Airlines Scandair announcement said this was the first time the polar shortcut had been used for a flight to Asia. It said the flight was made possible by the establishment of U.S. airbases in Alaska.

Scandair is negotiating with American authorities for use of the Alaska bases for a regular Scandinavia-Japan route.

Nova Scotia Premier Faces Toughest Fight of Career

HALIFAX, N.S. (BUP)—Nova Scotia voters go to the polls Tuesday to choose a new provincial government in a general election in which Liberal Premier Angus L. Macdonald faces one of the toughest fights in his 23-year political career.

Macdonald, 63-year-old former lawyer, beat his Progressive Conservative opponent in all but one of 60 polls in the Halifax South riding in the last provincial general election in 1948.

This year the same Conservative, John R. Milledge, a 31-year-old bond salesman, has returned with a hard-hitting radio and door-to-door campaign.

Milledge has criticized the premier for failing to spend as much to promote the port business in Halifax as on promoting the tuna-fishing industry for the village of Wedgeport.

Macdonald has won every election but one since he entered politics in 1930. In that year he ran for the federal House of Commons and was defeated. Since then he has run in four general elections in Nova Scotia, and also for the federal parliament in 1940 when he entered the Mackenzie King cabinet as minister of national defense for naval services.

In 1949, Macdonald polled 6,097 votes out of 10,349 and beat Milledge, who was picked by 3,212 voters. A CCF candidate ran that year but polled so few votes he lost his deposit.

This year the CCF is not contesting the riding.

Charging the premier with distorting facts, Capt. Proudfoot said: "Everybody exaggerates sometimes to help put over a point, but you must never distort facts to get votes."

Capt. Proudfoot said he was minding no words in his rebuttal of the premier's claims. "If I'm going to punch a man, I'm going to punch him straight in the nose and take my chances," he declared.

Mrs. Nancy Hodges, third Liberal candidate in the city, is currently campaigning for the party in the Okanagan.

Menziez, Churchill Plan Atomic Talks

CANBERRA (Reuters)—Prime Minister Robert Menziez will have secret talks with Sir Winston Churchill in London on further British atomic weapon tests in Australia in the near future, an authoritative source said here today.

The tests would be on land, probably at the Woomera range in central Australia or some adjacent area.

The prime ministers will also consider setting up an atomic research station in Australia, the source added.

Expansion of guided missiles research, now going on at Woomera, is also envisaged.

Menziez arrived in London Friday to attend the Coronation.

The official ecclesiastical name for Westminster Abbey is "Collegiate Church of St. Peter-in-Westminster."

DIVINE SERVICE
Members of the Masonic Lodge of Districts No. 1 and 21, together with their wives and families are invited to attend the evening service in St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church on Sunday, May 24, at 7:30 p.m. No refreshments.

A. W. TREVITT, D.D.G.M., District No. 1.
G. G. ORLEN, D.D.G.M., District No. 21.

Egyptian Press Raps U.K.'s 'Nerve War'

CAIRO (Reuters)—The Egyptian press today joined with the government in assailing Britain's advice to her civilians to get out of Egypt as part of a "war of nerves."

Meanwhile Britons preparing for an early return home went right ahead with their packing, despite an official Egyptian assurance that all foreigners would be fully protected by Premier Mohammed Naguib's government.

The British government gave the advice to leave this week after several Egyptian leaders threatened a "bitter battle" to home, and shooting incidents in the Suez Canal Zone flared up again.

The newspaper Akhbar El Yom said today: "Churchill is playing with fire. The instructions . . . are intended to create fear . . . to cause foreign capital in Egypt to be withdrawn."

"We must uncover this conspiracy of imperialism and assure the world that the government is capable of keeping order," the paper said. "Churchill is fighting with the dirtiest of weapons."

The newspaper Al Misri said Cairo sources viewed the British move as "part of an organized campaign to spread unrest in Egypt."

Friday night Lt.-Col. Gamal Abdel Nasser, vice-president of the revolutionary council, said the Egyptian government took full responsibility for the protection of all foreigners, including Britons, in the country.

The first groups of British civilians are scheduled to leave by air for home during the week-end.

Cargoes of raw wool are liable to spontaneous combustion unless thoroughly washed before shipment.

Credibility of the Witness

IN COURTS OF LAW IT IS COMMON practice for examining attorneys to test the credibility of witnesses. A barrister seeks to prove the accuracy or inaccuracy of statements from a person giving testimony.

The purpose of the procedure is obvious. If a witness is shown to be deliberately falsifying one part of his evidence, question is immediately raised over the honesty of the rest of it.

Much the same test is being applied by the public nowadays to the statements of public men. The technique of the "Big Lie" is being probed. Its sustained value is being challenged.

The "Big Lie" or even the half-truth has an immediate effect. It creates an impression damaging to someone else or temporarily advantageous to the person or movement on whose behalf it is told. The correction seldom catches up to the original false statement. Some abiding harm is often done to the victim, but the source from which the untruth comes does not escape unscathed. Caught in the lie, the teller loses credibility. By repetition he becomes a person considered devoid of moral worth and totally unfit for the confidence of honorable men or honorable society.

He falls into the position of the boy who shouted "Wolf." Even when he tells the truth, he is not believed. Such was the fate of Herr Goebbels who developed the technique of the "Big Lie" to a peak of expediency. Tell it often enough, he held, and the lie becomes accepted as the truth.

While Patients Wait

ANOTHER ELEVENTH-HOUR obstacle has arisen to block action on another city project. Victorians have been informed that legal technicalities stand in the way of final approval by the city of its contribution to the Victoria Nursing Home 104-bed addition.

The objection has been raised following first and second readings of the by-law covering Victoria's share of the construction fund. How the undertaking managed to proceed that far without recognition of legal barriers it is difficult to understand. The city has a competent solicitor and has the additional safeguard of a chief magistrate whose career was law.

He's Not Claiming 1,000 Years

A DECADE AGO THE WORLD heard Hitler boast of a Reich that would last a thousand years. The world knows now what came of that boast.

Today the people of British Columbia hear Premier Bennett forecasting that the Social Credit party will stay in power in this province for 50 years. And the people of British Columbia await the processes of history.

They have heard, too, Mr. Bennett claiming 40 seats in the next legislature. More recently they have heard him modestly confess he doesn't expect Social Credit to win all 48, but assures his hearers that Social Credit will take most of them.

Elsewhere it has been noted that Social Credit predictions have been consistently scaled down. Mr. Bennett and his colleagues presumably have had time to study the statistical returns from the last elections. By the fury of the premier's attack on the Liberals, it is to be assumed he and his advisers have found strength where they did not want to find it.

Mr. Bennett cannot be blamed for attempting a little positive psychology any more than Jersey Joe Walcott should be blamed for a similar practice before a different contest of recent memory.

As Our Readers See It

THAT'S FOR ME

As an Englishman who knows Salon, France, having passed through there, I say how amusing it was to read the article on Provence by Bruce Hutchison, especially the part about the Englishman being reckless and abandoned in the "pub."

If you all have such a sense of humor in B.C., then that's for me; B.C. or bust.

OBLIVION?

The Conservative pre-election promises have aroused the contempt and indignation of many in this province.

The odium of Toryism which is so prevalent all over B.C. is a sure sign that Tory capitalism is fighting its last battle, and within a short space of time will find itself in the same category as the handful of Liberals who are struggling to avoid oblivion.

IT WAS NEWS

Could you kindly explain why you chose the following headline for Saturday's paper: "Tobacco Road Director Quits"? Is this something for Victoria to be proud of? I sincerely hope not, and I don't think it rates headline news, for the simple reason it only emphasizes Victoria has lost all respect for the theatre.

"Tobacco Road" without its original dialogue will never be a success, and I'm now thankful I had the opportunity to see the play on opening night. The so-called obscene language is only shocking to those who do not understand the type of drama which they paid to see.

The Avon Theatre group did a magnificent job in producing Mr. Caldwell's novel on stage, and produced it in the manner the writer intended. Just because the Crown won its appeal, is this any reason to ruin a magnificent play?

Come on, Victoria, let's smarten up and forget this "Little Bit of Old England" trash.

UNFUNNY MONEY

Mr. G. W. Cousens objects to the term "Funny Money" as applied to Social Credit theory and credits his objection to statements made by Mr. Graham Towers and the late Dr. W. C. Clark to the standing committee on banking and commerce in connection with the issue of money and credit.

"Now what they call money is merely figures in a book," he says, echoing the "money at the end of a fountain pen" theory of Social Credit. He indicates further that instead of "figures in a book" banks should be limited to physical cash transactions. Presumably he objects to bank credit as a medium for loans, and the bible to him is merely letters in a book.

Apparently his objections are derived from the Social Credit manifesto which under the caption "Monetary Reform" states "The chartered banks would be required to maintain a 100 per cent cash reserve behind their demand deposits to ensure that they would no longer have the power to expand credit as in the past." "When the banks required additional money to loan to industries they would obtain this from the Monetary Commission," established by the Social Credit government.

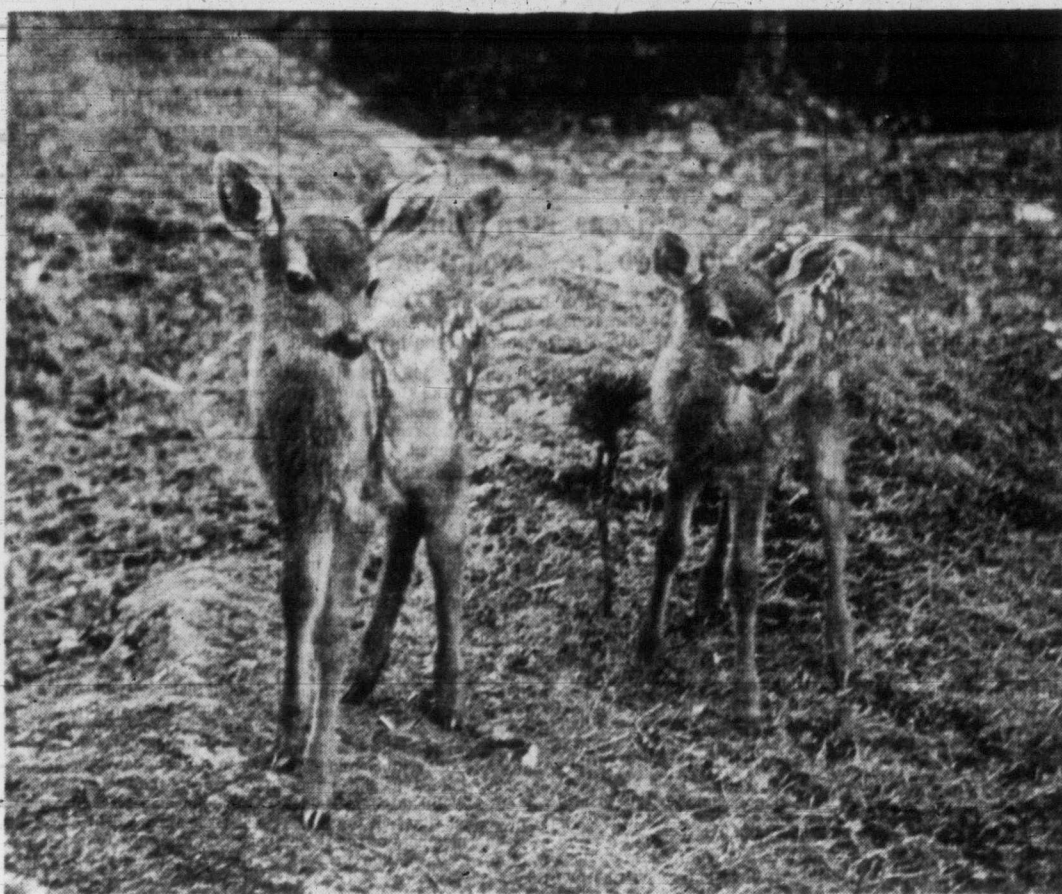

Perhaps, after all, Mr. Cousens is right. Monetary reform by Social Credit is not funny money. It is a tragedy that after all the experience of the last 30 years there are still people who think a political party can provide that "the money supply is at all times adequate to meet the needs of both the producers and consumers."

All settlements through banks are made by book entry. Cash probably runs to only about five per cent of total payments. But the purpose of money is not only as a medium for exchange and loans. It is a measure of commercial values or prices.

The basic error in all these so-called "reforms" is their disregard of money as a measure of value which is dependent from day to day on "human action."

Queen Victoria's Chef

BRUNNEN, Switzerland—Out of the forest, high above the green Lake of Lucerne, came an old man with a white beard down to his chest and an axe over his shoulder.

He might have been Santa Claus on holiday or William Tell about to liberate his country. Pausing on the trail, he lifted his battered Swiss hat and addressed us in German. When I shrugged helplessly he added: "Perhaps, sir, you are speaking English?"

And thus we met the chef who had cooked for Queen Victoria.

He was now over 80 years old, he was finished with the art of cookery, which he had practiced all over Europe, and he amused himself by cutting firewood on the mountain-side.

"But," he said, "I do not forget the English, which I like. I forgot only the speech English. It is long ago."

LONG ago, he explained, he was the chef in a great hotel at Bournemouth where, in the great day of his life, he had prepared a sumptuous dinner for the Queen of England, who had thanked him personally.

The English, he recalled, were a "first-class people" but he could not say the same for the Germans. As for the Russians, they were "the most wicked." He had seen the Russian aristocracy in the hotels of Europe, he had observed them mistreating their servants, who were compelled to sleep on the floor outside their bedrooms. So he had refused to cook in Russia and he had not been surprised by the brutality of Communism. It was what you would expect from the Russians.

THIS ex-chef, now retired in the remote Alpine village of Brunnen, obviously kept himself informed of the world's affairs. He discussed President Eisenhower at length, judging him a "clever man, and good." It was a pleasure, he kept repeating, to speak again in English, though he had forgotten much of the language. I think he would have talked to us all night in that forest where the high Alps thrust up their white, pointed teeth through the roof of Europe.

After our last night in Italy—spent in conversation with a youth who prospered by smuggling cigarettes from Switzerland on his back by a mountain trail—we had entered suddenly a new world through the tunnel of the St. Gotthard pass.

The pass was still blocked with snow, so we loaded our automobile on a flat car and rode in the darkness of the tunnel for 15 minutes at 60 miles an hour. Emerging again into daylight, we found ourselves on the watershed of a continent, from which flow the great rivers of Europe and most of its history. It was sunny but cold. Patches of snow still lay by the roadside and the air was filled with the sound of rushing torrents.

ITALY, with its soft days and languorous nights, its pink palaces and carved marble, is feminine. Switzerland is purely male, a country of clean, coniferous forests and clear lakes, much like the Canadian Rockies but, I am bound to confess, far more beautiful.

In Italy one is oppressed by the swarming inhabitants, the crowded villages, the sense of men's labors in every remote corner of cultivated land. In Switzerland there is elbowroom and the empty wilderness, where a Canadian finds himself instantly at home.

The Italian villagers croon their honeyed songs by moonlight. In the Swiss inn where I am writing this, the green lake straight below me, a radio, tinkles like a child's music box and the people in the garden are singing in harsh German, over their huge flagons of beer.

HERE, as the old chef observed, is the real wonder of Switzerland—three separate races and the three languages of Italian, German and French, somehow welded into the tightest and richest little nation of Europe.

"We are," said he, "one for all, all for one." Then, surveying the indescribable chaos of mountain, glacier, forest and lake, he tried to tell me the history of the Swiss confederation which has practiced democracy, freedom and commerce with all nations for centuries. "Ah," said he, his blue eyes twinkling, "it is small, not like Canada, but it is not good."

I agreed that it was good. Everything in Switzerland is good, the clean towns like cuckoo clocks hanging from the mountains, the perpendicular fields where the tiny mouse-colored cattle graze, the puff of white cherry blossoms, the pungent woods of pine, the girls unpainted and apple-cheeked, the lean men with their massive pipes of painted china, the rustle of moving water.

FROM my window, as darkness falls, I can see a tiny ship, ablaze with lights, gliding down the lake like a child's toy. This indeed is a toy land, a dream of childhood, walled by the encircling Alps from the grim reality of Europe.

Those mountains have kept Switzerland safe and peaceful through wars innumerable, they have made it rich by attracting the world's tourists, they have poured down the winter snow to power the nation's thriving industries, they have defied the brush of the painter and the language of the poet, they have bred the most competent people in Europe. The partnership of man and nature here, the emergence of a solid democracy atop this pinnacle of rock and snow is surely one of the chief wonders of history.

FOR a Canadian the lesson of Switzerland is especially relevant and vivid. We own, in our Rockies, the same sort of land, we are a nation of diverse races and languages but we have yet to master, tame and preserve the land, to weld our races, to protect and nourish our infinitely larger resources as the Swiss have done through hundreds of years.

As we stood in a green valley above the forest amid the tinkle of the cowbells and the swirl of Alpine waterfalls, a larger bell from the white steeple of a church suddenly boomed out the knell of parting day, an old woman struggled up the road with a basket of firewood on her back, the farmers trudged homeward from their fields, the lights twinkled from the lake-shore up to the edge of the glaciers and the toy ship set out on her voyage into dreamland.

A PILLOW FOR A WAR CLUB

'Useful and Constructive' at Bermuda

THE headlines this week provided evidence that Britain and the United States were anxious to clear up the misunderstandings and close the gaps that had appeared between them in recent days.

The trans-Atlantic exchange of criticism, that had descended to the level of personalities in the case of Senator McCarthy and Mr. Clement Attlee, was followed quickly by announcement of a meeting of chief executives designed to harmonize the allies' policies.

But even in the announcement of the conference, proposed for Bermuda in the latter part of June, differences of opinion appeared.

Premier Mayer of France, the third party to the talks, openly indicated that the conference would discuss the feasibility of a later meeting with Malenkov. Churchill hoped it would be a step toward a "meeting of far greater import." But on Friday came word from U.S. State Secretary Dulles, now touring India, that his country would not consider any such leaders' meeting with the Soviet while Communist aggression was still taking place in Korea and South-East Asia.

SOMEWHAT FARTHER

In saying this, Mr. Dulles went somewhat further than had President Eisenhower in earlier comment on the topic. Shortly after taking office, the President said he would meet Russia halfway in any attempt to negotiate on a personal basis. But later he indicated that he would first require some proof from the Soviet that Moscow was sincerely interested in peace.

Still later he explained that such an "interest" must be demonstrated by deeds rather than words. On the basis of Mr. Dulles' statement, these deeds apparently would have to include a settlement of peace in Korea, withdrawal from French Indo-China and recall of occupation troops from Austria.

The proposed Bermuda meeting of the Big Three therefore shrank somewhat in content even before the agenda could have been fixed. A further setback was seen in the defeat of the Mayer administration within a few minutes of the Premier's announcement of the conference.

With his successor uncertain, and in view of the poor life expectancy of French governments—Mayer's cabinet was the 18th since the end of the war—France might well have to go to the vital meeting with an uncertain voice.

This was the very weakness with which Mr. Attlee had charged President Eisenhower a few days earlier when he referred to the schism that can exist between an American head of state and his Congress, and hoped that Mr. Eisenhower could speak with full authority if he were to confer with other top-level representatives.

PRELIMINARY PROBLEMS

The Bermuda meeting, which was initiated by the U.S. leader, thus had some preliminary problems on its hands. But most observers held that the talks would be of great value—were, indeed, a necessity at this time.

Prime Minister Churchill has not seen Mr. Eisenhower since shortly before the President took office. Mr. Mayer paid a more recent visit to Washington, but latterly there had not been full agreement between the two countries on the course to be pursued in regard to the invasion of Laos.

Paradoxically enough, it was not a renewed onslaught by Russia that brought the western allies to the point of needing the reassurance of personal contact between their leaders. On the contrary, it was the new, soft approach of the Malenkov regime that appeared to have led to disagreements and misunderstandings between Communism's two principal opponents.

A few months ago, in the days of Stalin, when Soviet delegates to the United Nations could not speak without hurling at least a few epithets at the "warmongers," "decadent capitalists" and similar forms of western life, and few days passed without insulting references in the official Russian press, the West had less need of conferences to clarify their joint stand. The enemy was plain to see and each fresh attack on the democracies closed the ranks against the common danger.

The Malenkov touch, perhaps calculated, certainly more formidable, was having the opposite effect. Uncertainty over the extent to which the Kremlin could now be believed, confusion arising from the shouting of such men as America's witch-hunting Senator McCarthy, and misunderstandings in connection with the Korean peace-making and other matters, were accomplishing, at least on a small scale, what threats and vituperation never could.

Malenkov apparently had thrown away his war club and was now flogging his foreign opponents with a silken cushion. The exchange of wounded Korean prisoners, the release of certain missionaries and civilian captives, newsman William Oatis among them, the sudden withdrawal of the Communist invaders from Laos, the conciliatory but not as yet very productive attitude on some international questions—these tactics demanded a readjustment in western thinking.

NO CHANGE

One thing was certain. There was no indication that the over-all doctrine of Communism had been changed. There was no assurance that world peace was an aim and not merely a propaganda motto of the Kremlin. There was no proof that Moscow was not still out to accomplish by guile what arms and threats had failed to do.

These were points that might be clarified at Bermuda where it was hoped, as Canada's External Affairs Minister L. B. Pearson put it while passing through Victoria on Friday, that something "useful and constructive" will eventuate.

Whatever the decisions reached there, and whatever the extent of Malenkov's kill-with-kindness campaign, it looked highly doubtful that the Soviet would be willing to pay the price of admission set by Mr. Dulles on a Big Four meeting. Deeds come much higher in international coinage than words.—B.A.T.

Kisutch and His Fellows Compete for Food In Shrinking World of Dwindling Pool

BY DR. G. CLIFFORD CARL, Director, Provincial Museum

A NUMBER of almost imperceptible changes had taken place in the stream occupied by Kisutch and other coho salmon fry since they had first emerged from the gravel in which they were incubated.

The temperature of the water, at first almost ice-cold, had risen slowly now that the snow had left the hills. Fewer insect larvae were present in the water; many had been eaten by the fast-growing salmon and some had left as adults. The water flow had gradually decreased; more and more of the rubby stream bed had become exposed as the water level had dropped.

The increased activity induced by the warmer water, the dwindling food supply and the restrictions in space and stream flow all served to intensify competition and rivalry among the fish inhabitants.

A new restlessness came upon Kisutch. He began to move about the pool aimlessly, occasionally being driven from one point to another as he wandered into territory guarded by other fish. He swam upstream a short distance but finding his way partially blocked by shallow water he dropped back to the home pool.

As the depths of the pool darkened in the fading light the disturbed fish again moved among the partly exposed boulders along the bank and feeling the persuasive tug of the current leaving the pool he allowed himself to drift downstream with the gentle flow. By nightfall he took up a position not far above the stream's entrance to the river.

The fish remaining in the pool continued to carry on more or less as before; each one occupied its accustomed place except those nearest the stream's edge where lowering levels forced some of the cohoes to move into deeper parts where they met some opposition from those already stationed there.

Water continued to flow into the pool but in a dwindling supply which entered through the gravel at the upper end of the pool and filtered out through the rocky bottom.

Because of the reduced water supply which no longer carried tid-bits into the pool, competition for food became more acute among the now crowded fish. Each petal or flake of bark which fell onto the surface triggered a rush among the hungry cohoes.

The first to arrive would flick the object below the surface then dash back towards its starting point with the others in hot pursuit. After mousing the object the fish would release it to be snatched by another which repeated the action until most of the fish in the pool had tested the inedible morsel.

Occasionally a luckless caddis-fly would attempt to rise toward the surface from its stony pupal case. Before completing half the distance it would be seized and torn apart by a horde of hungry mouths as the coho fry closed in on the kill.

The larger fish were the most successful in getting food under these conditions; they continued to grow while their smaller brothers and sisters lagged behind. Thus size differences became augmented and competition became one-sided.

Before the skunk cabbage along the upper reaches had attained their full growth most of the stream had disappeared beneath its gravel bed, and the pool had dwindled to half its former size. Many of the boulders even in the deepest part now were partly exposed and the algae on their upper surfaces dried into a silvery crust. The days of late spring passed with no promise of relief from drought.

A garter snake absorbing warmth from the sun-heated stones close to the water eventually moved down to the pool and drank, sucking the water in by rhythmic swellings of the throat. Submerging his head it then glided into the water and sinuously swam close to the bottom towards the deepest areas. Coho fry in its path darted away among the boulders.

One fish, attempting to escape through a too-narrow crack between stones turned back to try another route. With a quick stroke the snake seized the fish in its jaws, swam back to the water's edge and crawled out holding its prey clear of the gravel. Resting the struggling fish on the pebbles the snake worked its jaws down to the head and began to swallow its victim moving first the upper jaw forward then the lower until the fish disappeared from view.

The reptile slid again into the water and emerged shortly with another fish; it repeated the action many times until engorged. The few fry left in the pool did not emerge from hiding for some time after the snake had glided slowly away.

Birds and Banks

THE march of progress around where I live threatens to play havoc with our own local brand of nature's balance. A delightful young couple who are planning to build near us have been busily engaged in clearing the lot—and doing a job which evokes my deepest admiration for their energy.

But the property they happen to be clearing has for long been the private preserve for the pheasants and the quail who make this neighborhood a joy for me—even if I do deprecate their liking for our young bean sprouts and tulip bulbs.

In consequence, we haven't seen or heard the pheasants for days while the quail—sadly reduced from a one-time 40-odd to a couple of pairs—dejectedly parade up the driveway and over the rocks with an air which suggests that they are, like so many humans today, bewildered and confused by the strange happenings which are upsetting their bird-world and causing them to wander, exiles in search of a new country.

My reference to nature's balance arose out of the odd presence of some pigeons in the garden the other day. They say that nature abhors a vacuum and I am hoping that the gradual ousting of the quail and pheasants as we lose our semi-rural surroundings doesn't mean that the more sophisticated, city denizen—the pigeon—is going to move in.

ALL RIGHT IN THEIR PLACE?

Pigeons may be all right in their place—but I don't want them to make our place their place, thank you! I have seen what they can do of damage in cities where they have practically taken over the public buildings, for instance.

Just a week ago, the city officials and business men of Hamilton, Ont., got together to mull over some course of action against the pigeons and starlings that haunt the downtown area, doing damage to the extent of thousands of dollars. The birds were described as a menace to the health, property, and dignity of the city and to the tourist trade.

The Humane Society, when asked for suggestions, said it would gladly gas the birds if somebody caught them. A radio engineer offered to work out a sort of super-sound whistle to annoy them into leaving Hamilton. But the mayor said they would soon get used to the noise and be back again.

Other angry businessmen offered suggestions varying from scaring them off with firecrackers to transporting them en masse to some unsuspecting neighboring city. Evidently Hamilton would rather be at outs with a neighbor than put up with the pigeons. I couldn't resist a chuckle when the leader of the protesting group said that not even tearing down the blighted buildings would eliminate the feathered menace. When the Bank of Nova Scotia was torn down, he said, its pigeons took up residence on the Bank of Commerce. Which, to me, suggested that the feathered residents are unusually amenable to changes in their own peculiar banking habits.

BRITAIN LOSES BATTLE

Starlings were also the subject of discussion in the British House of Commons recently, when a solemn House was told that Britain had lost the Battle of Trafalgar—and right under Lord Nelson's nose, too! The minister of agriculture admitted that the war on the 40,000 starlings that roost nightly in Trafalgar Square around the Nelson column had not gone at all according to plan.

In fact, the casualty list, following the use of net-traps, read thus: "One starling injured. Fell by accident." So, to the cheers of the MP's, a Dartford member asked the minister to consider the time-honored method of putting salt on their tails.

After all that, can you wonder that I view with the alarm the appearance—even though it may be temporary—of pigeons in the garden.

FROM WASHINGTON

By WALTER LIPPMAN

On the Thin Edge

AFTER a year of the U.S. election campaign and the labor pains of the Eisenhower administration which is still trying to be born, I was no doubt especially sensitive to the constitutional disorder in the leading countries of the European continent. But after going to Rome, to Bonn, and to Paris there was no denying, it seemed to me, that for the time being the essential preoccupation of the western world is whether, when, and how the free nations can achieve effective government.

Until then the discussion of the great issues, the taking of decisions, the making of policies must be largely an academic exercise. With the exception of Great Britain only, the leading countries of the West are in the grip of a constitutional struggle.

For that reason I would venture to say that the critical question which the Churchill speech has raised is whether the men have been elected, or can be found, who could speak with sufficient authority to confer and negotiate on any great matter. The underlying assumption of the Churchill speech is that there exists in the leading countries representatives who could, if they thought it wise and if the Soviet Union agreed to it, confer and negotiate.

This assumption is not now valid in at least four of the principal nations of the West. The democratic process by which the voters consent to the formation of a government that can govern is laboring under grave difficulties. They are so grave that they can be described soberly as a constitutional crisis.

Until this crisis is overcome, we shall feel—and in fact multitudes do feel—how dim and feeble is the light and leading of governments and how strong are the blind brute forces of time and change.

Eight years have now passed since the world war ended and, for better or worse, a new era is upon us because, as a matter of fact, time marches on.

The governments formed during and immediately after the war are all being replaced—by elections, by retirement and supernatu-ation, and by death. The underlying forces of time and change work in all societies and on both sides of the iron curtain.

It is not a meaningless coincidence that the term of the Democratic party in America and of the Stalinist regime in the U.S.S.R. ended at about the same time. Both belonged to the generation which governed before and during immediately after the world war.

What is more, there are changes in the making in Germany, France and Italy because the new political generation is knocking on the door. The common, underlying, and controlling element in all these developments is, as we heard last summer, that it is time for a change. This, besides being a Republican campaign slogan, is also a law of nature.

But this change, though unavoidable and necessary, is proving to be inordinately difficult.

As we can see only too well in Washington it is in the world today no easy matter to bring into being sufficiently strong governments by the process of popular election. There are, of course, special circumstances in each country. But there is also a common and fundamental condition in the constitutional disorder of the western world.

It is one well known to the founding fathers of the American republic and one which was their constant pre-occupation. It is that the legislative assemblies, being closest to the voters, are exerting their power to invade and to usurp the prerogatives of the Executive. Since it is impossible for assemblies to govern a country, they exercise their usurped power by preventing the Executive from governing it.

What is it that Europeans feel? They feel, to put it quite flatly, that President Eisenhower has failed to assert his legitimate authority, and thus to do his duty, which is to defend the balance of the constitution, the powers of the Executive, its responsibility and duties in dealing with foreign affairs, the dignity of the government, and the rights of individual Americans.

Not to report this condition of opinion, which may become crucial to the future of our alliance and of the unity of the free world, would be to hide from our people the truth, however disagreeable, that they must not be denied.

Island Digest

PORT ALBERNI — John Perry, public accountant, defeated three other candidates in a by-election here to fill the city council seat vacated by John Squire, Alberni CCF candidate in the June 9 provincial election.

Mr. Perry polled 364 votes. Others were A. C. Flanagan, 222; John Feser, 143, and Fred King, 89.

SOOKE — July 23 has been set as the date this year for the annual All-Sooke Day celebration held on Sooke River flats.

Sooke Community Association, sponsor of the event, has named committees and announced additional space has been cleared for parking and displays.

The bathing beauty contest, held for the first time in 1952, will be staged again this year.

DUNCAN — King's Daughters Hospital board voted Friday night to buy a $2,647 X-ray machine, and is now concerned with finding space for it in the overcrowded building.

Following inspection of the hospital by the provincial fire marshal and Duncan fire chief, the board ordered construction of an additional fire escape ramp.

The board still hopes to build a new hospital within two years.

DUNCAN — Directors of Cowichan Co-operative Curling Association have appointed J. L. Thomas as manager, with the job of bringing attractions to the arena on a profit-sharing basis.

Action has been taken to lay a cement floor and put the arena on a year-round operating basis.

JORDAN RIVER — Esquimalt Liberal candidate Geoffrey I. Edgelow said here Friday night that the Liberal platform includes construction of a road to Port Renfrew.

The plan is feasible, he said, adding that a loop road through the Cowichan district would double tourist travel in the area.

UCLUELET — H. J. Hillier, native of England and resident here for 50 years, was entertained this week by 28 of his friends at a supper to celebrate his 80th birthday.

DUNCAN — CCF candidate Robert Strachan's charge that the Vancouver firm of Watts Marketing Research had taken an illegal "straw vote" in Duncan and Nanaimo, reached police court level Friday.

David Williams, counsel for the defendant firm, appeared before Magistrate A. C. Sutton, heard the charge read, and obtained an eight-day adjournment without plea.

Mr. Strachan contends that through polling citizens of Nanaimo and Duncan on their political attitudes, the firm was violating a section of the provincial Elections Act.

PORT ALBERNI — Thomas Irwin, Speaker of the last Legislature, told an election audience here Friday night that the effective-living course, which was subject to so much criticism by Social Credit J. A. Reid, of Salmon Arm, was not a subject which should be taught by school teachers.

He said the material in the course was such that it should be handled by specialists—doctors, nurses and dietitians.

Plague May Bring Slaughter of Hogs

Veterinary surgeons on Vancouver Island have been alerted to the danger of an epidemic of "hog cholera" spreading throughout British Columbia, which could result in the enforced slaughter of all hogs in the province.

The dreaded disease has broken out in Ontario, livestock officials of the Department of Agriculture said today.

$500,000 Damage in Brandon Fire, Four Men Hospitalized

BRANDON (CP)—Smouldering rubble is all that remains of the downtown Security Building following a Friday-morning blaze which raged unchecked for more than six hours. Damage was unofficially estimated at $500,000. Four men were sent to hospital.

Twenty minutes after the fire started at 6 a.m., Bernard R. Coleman, Brandon barrister and returning officer for the provincial constituency of Brandon, was overcome by smoke as he tried to rescue election records. A short time later Capt. W. L. Carey, 59, of the Brandon fire brigade was also overcome.

Two other members of the brigade were admitted to hospital Friday evening. Ernest Butler, 53, suffered smoke burns to the eyes and Kenneth Graham, 30, was treated for smoke suffocation.

FARMER FOUND DEAD

MEADOW LAKE, Sask. (CP)—Cognellus Quering, 64, was found dead Friday at his farm home near Barnes Crossing, 20 miles northwest of here. Apparently he died suddenly while doing chores.

OPEN VERDICT

EDMONTON (CP)—A coroner's jury returned an open verdict Friday in its inquiry into a traffic accident May 3 which claimed the life of 18-year-old Doreen Grant of Edmonton.

Miss Grant, a passenger in an automobile driven by James Fox, died in hospital hours after she was seriously injured when the car missed a curve near Edmonton.

HAILSTORM REPORTED

MEDICINE HAT, Alta. (CP)—Hail was reported Friday afternoon at Bow Island, 38 miles southwest of here, with hailstones reported the size of large peas. No property damage was reported in the half-hour storm.

Thatched roofs, still popular in England and Wales, will last from 15 to 25 years when laid properly.

VICTORIA SUPER SERVICE LTD. CELEBRATE

WE HAVE COME TO THE QUARTER CENTURY MARK IN OUR SERVICE TO YOU

Victoria Super Service Ltd., one of Vancouver Island's leading automotive sales and service firms, recalls its beginning in 1928. On May 24 of that year, on a scant 360 square foot lot in the most central location in the city, the new gas station opened its doors—a business which now covers an area of 4,500 square feet and features one of the finest mechanically equipped shops on the Island, with entrances from three main streets. In addition to Nash and Morris car sales, Victoria Super Service is the Vancouver Island distributor for Nash and Morris parts and have recently opened a Nash-Morris sales and service centre in Duncan, B.C.

For 25 years a continuous 24-hour-a-day service has been maintained, including a road service employing a Holmes Wrecking Car under skilled operation. National Credit Cards are accepted at Victoria Super Service Ltd., where tourists and residents alike get every attention.

G. R. Sword, one of the original founders, is President and General Manager of the firm which is an exceptionally well co-ordinated organization headed by five directors who are continually planning better ways of serving the motoring public.

ORIGINAL SERVICE STATION FOUNDED IN 1928

The history of the firm dates back to early 1928 when the amalgamation of Victoria Auto Supply Co. with Sword Service Station established the firm of VICTORIA SUPER SERVICE. G. R. Sword, one of its founders, recalls that hurried installation of gas pumps had to be made in time for the May 24 holiday opening. Four brands of gasoline were sold until a general preference for SHELL led to discontinuing other brands. Present Victoria Super Service occupies the original location which is the most central and easily accessible in the city.

SHELL PREMIUM GASOLINE

IS THE MOST POWERFUL GASOLINE YOUR CAR CAN USE!

And here is the reason why! Shell gasoline is activated by splitting and re-arranging petroleum molecules... a process which calls for the last word in refinery equipment and scientific skill. THE RESULT—SHELL PREMIUM—The Most Powerful Gasoline Your Car Can Use... at Victoria Super Service 24 hours a day!

VICTORIA SUPER SERVICE TODAY... OCCUPIES ITS ORIGINAL LOCATION

Grown to many times its original size, the large, modern service station accommodates both the sales and service departments and features expansive showrooms for Nash and Morris cars.

Soccer Tourists Acclaimed Greatest of Irish Teams

By MALCOLM BRODIE
Soccer writer of The Belfast Telegraph, who is accompanying the Irish tourists.

Virtually every aspect of British soccer is represented in this Ireland team which is visiting Canada just now and will play in Victoria on Coronation Day, June 2... the ball artist, the slow, short-passing style of the Scots... the high-speed inter-changing movements of the English and that attribute which is so Irish — enthusiasm and the ability to fight back when the dice is loaded against them. In fact, this could, without hesitation, be termed a British team.

The touring party who will play 11 matches during their Canadian and United States sojourn are probably the most representative squad of soccer stars ever to visit Canada under an "international flag." And the reason... they learned their arts and crafts of our national game in multifarious parts of the British Isles.

You'll like these boys in green who have performed so well in the British international soccer championship this season and who are speaking now in terms of qualifying in their zone for next June's World Cup matches at Zurich. Never before has there been such an air of confidence in an Irish team... a confidence which can be backed up by playing ability. This is one of the greatest... some say the greatest... Irish eleven of all time.

It is due to the forthright, give-youth-a-chance policy of the selectors, three of whom are accompanying the team... President Fred J. Cochran and Messrs. Sam Walker (Coleraine) and Alf Kennedy (Ballymena) United. They have worked to a plan which is paying dividends. Back-pat, too, must go to Peter Doherty, the Ireland team-manager who, unfortunately, cannot make the trip because of club commitments. But since the day that "Peter the Great," one of the world's most wonderful ball wizards, took command Ireland's soccer firmament was put on a new foundation.

Doherty approaches international matches in the manner which all stars do. He has a methodical schedule of training; he has excellently instructive tactics, talks with the players who, above all, respect his genius. And, supported by the selectors, he is ensuring that there is a flow of youthful talent available by having "B" internationals played such as the one in Belfast against the British Army last September.

Many young stars were discovered in that match, one of them being rewarded by selection for this trip. Step forward then the babe of the tourists, Jackie Scott (Manchester United), that slip-of-a-boy right winger who has a star-studded future awaiting him. It's not so long ago that Jackie was playing around the streets of his native Belfast kicking a soft rubber ball.

But Matt Busby, that intellectual manager of Manchester United, realized the ability of this boy and before he could be signed by a Belfast club he was whisked "across the water" to England.

That term "across the water" explains the reason why so many of the Ireland players have English club tags. Immediately they reach the heights they are snatched by English and Scottish outfits and a scan over the line-outs shows just how many (Asterisks sprinkle British football. Yes, Northern Ireland, with a population of just over one million, should certainly feel proud of her football product. It's almost as famous nowadays as that snow-white linen!

Once in England these players take football really seriously. With the exception, perhaps, of a few cases, they become full-time professionals devoting every day, every week, to the game which they love. They are nurtured, prompted, prodded into high-level efficiency which usually leads to a coveted Ireland "cap".

Make no mistake, Irish League is no minor body. It is legislatively on a par with the English and Scottish Leagues and is, in fact, a member of the Inter-League Board. But the playing standard just doesn't reach the cross-channel level, though many a hectic tussle—and defeat—these visiting teams have encountered at Windsor Park, Belfast, traditional setting for all showpiece games in the city.

How, therefore, could the Irish League be expected to hold its own with their cross-channel counterparts who pluck all the "plums" just as they ripen? And it is these "plums" who are on tour just now. Included in the party, of course, are three Irish League players... right-half Billy Neill (Glenfort), outside left, Bruce Shields (Cliftonville) and centre-forward Sammy Hughes (Glenfort). Here are three players who could command fees in the $36,000 category if they were on the transfer market.

This is the first occasion on which an Ireland international side has made a trans-Atlantic tour, though during the past 20 years or so parties have visited France and Norway. No later than last November they played France before 40,000 at the Colombes Stadium, Paris.

Many other Continental junkets could have been planned. But matches would necessarily have had to be played on Sundays, which is a contravention of the Articles of Association. It is an adamant rule.

It is the hope that this tour is the forerunner of many to the Dominion. Perhaps, too, the day is not too far distant when a Canadian "national side" will make a British trip.

IT'S MY VIEW

By BILL WALKER, Sports Editor

Tennis has had its fling and now Ireland replaces Australia in the continental sports whirl.

The mighty Irish international soccer side steps in where Frank Sedgman and Ken McGregor left their mark in the local racquet world.

Ten days away is the first visit ever of an Irish representative side, considered by some as the best Ireland team yet.

The lads from the land of the Shamrock will be here Coronation Day. This is the team, with but three exceptions, which held the night of England to a 2-2 draw at Belfast last fall. This is the club which led Scotland until the final minute of the game before the Scots could equalize at 1-1 at mammoth Hampden Park, home of the Scots. And this is the club which narrowly failed against France, being a one-goal loser in Paris.

It's the greatest record any Irish international side has ever achieved and its more remarkable when one considers that all the tourists are natives of that little bit of green they call Ulster which boasts but a population of just over 1,000,000.

Now let's go back a couple of years to the day Fulham, then mighty Fulham of the English first division, trotted out to the pitch at Athletic Park. Few football fans will ever forget that memorable occasion which ranks as one of the all-time great moments in local sport history.

The touring pride of the English League walked off that same field some 90 minutes of playing time later with their heads bowed in humble defeat.

Winger Ab Travis scored the only goal of that game, while Ab's brother, Joe, performed miraculously in goal to preserve the shutout.

The Travis boys weren't on last year's local side and probably it wouldn't have made much difference to Tottenham, if they were. But they're back this season and the Irish could well remember that history often has a strange and cruel way of repeating itself.

Or what's that old and respected Irishism? "They could bring one another down to one another's level..."

And Fulham, it will also be recalled, never did recover from the indignity of that loss and now repose uncomfortably in the English League second division.

Coronation Day, it is, then, for the best in soccer this year between the "Cinderella" Irish team of international competition and Victoria All-Stars, whose motto will be "Remember Fulham."

While on the subject of soccer, here's a little tidbit through the courtesy of Jim Hall, a recent visitor to the land of the Heather and the Haggis.

Jim took in the Scottish Cup semifinal between Third Lanark and Aberdeen and was so much distressed by the soccer artistry he failed to see that he complained bitterly to his relatives, about the calibre of the game, upon his return from the match.

As Jim says, his brother remarked: "You haven't changed a bit have you; you always were good at beefing."

"I had the last word, though," Jim said, "especially when I got the newspaper account of the game."

"And I knew you wouldn't believe it here in Victoria either," he commented, and with that remark produced a copy of the Daily Record of April 9.

And therein was contained the following news story, in part, of the game:

"A Scottish Cup semifinal forsooth! It was more like a trial match run by a juvenile club trying to find reserve players. And maybe in saying that I will incur the wrath of our juvenile committee-men... both teams were masters of wasted opportunity and the only skill they revealed was in the accurate way in which they could pass the ball to an opponent... from first to last, the tie (pardon the word) was the essence of mediocrity. Lacking in ball control, lacking in method, lacking in even second-class intelligence, it packed into itself with maddening reiterating, every mistake known on the football field..."

Victoria High School's stadium was rocked with cheers Friday as students hailed their favorites in the Inter-High track championships. And the target of one of the greatest ovations was Brian Perry-Whittingham, Vic High's distance runner, who won the open three-mile race on sheer determination. (See story Page 9.) (Times Photo.)

Broncs Edge Tyees

10-Run Inning All to No Avail

Lewiston 12, Victoria 11

Victoria Tyees didn't win their ball game in Lewiston Friday night, but they must have given Lewiston fans an interesting evening—if the fans stayed around long enough to see the fun.

The Tyees trailed 2-1 after one inning, 5-1 after six innings and 10-1 after eight frames. Any fans who went home at that point missed the fireworks as the Tyees erupted like a long dormant volcano, scoring 10 runs in the top of the ninth inning to go ahead 11-10. But the eruption petered out and Lewiston scored two runs in the bottom of the ninth to cop a 12-11 victory.

It was the fourth straight loss of the week for the Tyees and dumped them into a tie for last place with Yakima and Edmonton although they are only one game out of the first division.

Tyees were down 10-1 when the fateful top of the ninth opened, Cee Garriott starting it off with a base on balls. Chuck Abernathy singled and Nap Guiley doubled to chase in Garriott. After Gale Taylor struck out, Milt Martin drove Abernathy home with a single and pinch-hitter Sam Brusa was walked. Jim Clark went out on a pop-up, leaving the Tyees seven runs down with two out.

RUNS CAME QUICKLY

But Bob Moniz singled to score Guiley and Martin. Mike Williams walked to load them again and Garriott walked to force in the fifth run of the frame. Abernathy lined out his second single, scoring Moniz. Guiley hit his second double of the inning to unload the jammed hassocks for the three runs that tied it and Taylor singled home Guiley with the run that gave the Tyees the lead. Taylor was thrown out at second base to end the fantastic inning.

Bill Bottler pitched seven innings for the Tyees and was replaced by Don Hopp in the eighth. After Hopp was lifted for a pinch-hitter in the ninth, Bob Drilling went in to protect the one-run lead.

WILLIAMS BRONCS HERO

However, after Clint Cameron opened the Lewiston ninth with a single, Larry Barton bunted and all hands were safe when Drilling made a wild throw on the plate. Ken Richardson was intentionally walked to set up the force play but Bob Williams ended it quickly with a two-run double. Williams had himself a big night at the plate with four hits, two of them doubles and five runs batted-in.

In direct contrast was the game at Spokane where Indian hurler Bill Frank blanked Tri-City Braves 1-0 on a neat two-hitter. His own ninth-inning single scored the only run of the game.

Yakima Bears dropped Salein Senators 7-3. (Box score page 10.)

Tyees Issue Fan Appeal

WIL Club May Fold if Support Not Forthcoming

By BILL WALKER

The future of professional baseball in the city once again rests with the fans.

Obviously in dire financial straits because of poor attendance in the first 12 home games of the season, the Victoria Baseball and Athletic Club today issued what is tantamount to a direct appeal for more fan support, or else...

Club directors, meeting Friday to consider the situation, implied in a prepared press release that if further support is not forthcoming in next week's home stand, it is probable that the Tyees will be forced to drop out of the Western International League.

Either that or efforts will be made to dispose of the club to other interests.

Club officials feel that a second "save baseball" campaign, too, place last year is out of the question and have put the future of the game in the laps of the sporting public.

It amounts to this, general manager Reg Patterson said:

"If Victorians want professional baseball, and I think they do, they can have it by attending next week's games in numbers sufficient to assure the financial success of the club."

No figures were announced as a yardstick. But it is believed that the ultimate club directors are hoping for is a general expression of support for the game in order that the local franchise may be saved. Complete text of the prepared statement follows:

The affairs of the company were thoroughly gone into and we find that we are experiencing financial difficulties through the lack of attendance at our games.

In the first 14 games of this year, the attendance was approximately 12,000, as against 27,000 people in the same period last year, which means a net loss of $8,000 to the club, and, in addition, the additional loss at the concessions.

The club will return home on Monday, May 25th, for three games against Wenatchee, and Yakima for four games.

If the attendance has not improved very materially and if other financial assistance is not received, then it will be necessary for the directors to hold a further meeting at the end of next week to further consider our position.

Gasmen Show Spirit, Wiebe Hurls 3-Hitter

Capital City 3, Navy 1

Last Monday night Capital City Gasmen of the Senior A Men's Softball League were down to six players as they turned up for a scheduled game with Butler Bros. Aces, and coach Joe Bryant rounded up the three Clarkson brothers to field a complete team.

They went through the motions for nine innings, dropping an 11-3 decision and after the game Bryant called a special meeting for Wednesday night to try an iron out team difficulties.

Apparently something came out of that meeting because Friday night at Central Park the Gasmen had a lot more willingness than they have shown all season. Behind the three-hit pitching of Ab Wiebe they tripped the slumping Navy nine 3-1 and moved to within a point of second place.

The Gasmen opened the game with two runs on a double by Jimmy Morrison that drove in Ken Gunter and Les Wilson and, as it happened those two runs would have been enough. In the top of the fourth the Gasmen picked up their third run when Flori Goegan doubled and scored on a single through the middle by Verne Evans.

UNEARNED RUN

Wiebe lost his shutout in the sixth when he made a bad throw to first base on a high hopper back to the mound hit by Mel Padgett.

Two were out, at the time

GIOVANELLI UPSETS MARTINEZ

Sub Fighter Title Threat

NEW YORK (UP)—"He'll be welterweight champion within a year," declared the elated manager of Danny Giovannelli today.

Pilot Lippy Breitbart was in seventh heaven because young Giovannelli of Brooklyn, a 135-underdog substitute, had licked highly-touted Vince Martinez of Paterson, N.J., in an electrifying brawl.

What a fight! And what an ovation the aggressive Giovannelli received after his first main event in Madison Square Garden from the 4,384 fans, when Johnny Addie announced he had won a split 10-round decision.

Lanky, black-haired Giovannelli was almost "out on his feet" in the sixth round, and he was on the floor for a count of seven in the ninth session; but his persistent attack, his long left jabs and ripping barages to the body earned him his 12th straight victory.

ROLAND WON'T FIGHT

NEW YORK (AP)—Roland La Starza Friday declined a challenge to fight Ezzard Charles for the right to get the next shot at heavyweight champion Rock Marciano.

"Charles has had plenty of title fights," said La Starza's manager, Jimmy de Angelo. "Now Roland wants his chance. He's waited three years for a promised return bout with Marciano and we're not going to let anything stand in our way now."

Danny not only won his 20th victory in 22 professional bouts, but he established himself a great box-office attraction in the nationally televised and broadcast thriller. The gross gate was only $15,715.

at such a terrific pace that both youngsters were lurching on leaden legs in the torrid 10th round. It was so close the ring officials disagreed.

Judge Harold Barnes favored Giovannelli on rounds, 5-4-1, and Judge Arthur Susskind had him ahead, 6-4. But referee Ruby Goldstein voted for Martinez, 6-3-1. The United Press had it even: 4-4-2.

Martinez, "rookie of the year" in 1952, was attempting a comeback after his defeat by Chico Vejar on March 13. Giovannelli, who will be 21 on Monday, was picked to fight when Uncle Sam took Vejar into the army and prevented his meeting Martinez in their scheduled return bout.

Vic High Track Champs

Perry Stars in Three Mile

Harris, Pat Lisle Aggregate Winners

A spindle-limbed, barrel-chested ball of fire who makes up in courage and endurance what he lacks in style, Brian Perry-Whittingham won only one event Friday in the Greater Victoria Inter-High School track championships, but none of the aggregate winners drew more applause for their feats.

Perry-Whittingham looks as if he is all hinges and joints when he runs but he came out of nowhere Friday to capture the most grueling event of the day, the boys' open three-mile. Running the first three of the 12 laps way back in the pack, the Vic High youth twice took the lead, lost it and regained it and won the event with a time of 16:32.8.

Perry was dogged until the seventh lap by Vic High's Mike Chambers and Mount View's Ken Murray. Murray, who holds the local record of 16:28.2, was released from hospital only three weeks ago after a long bout with jaundice and was running against the advice of his coaches.

The game youngster gave it a gritty try but collapsed at the side of the track after seven laps and no one else bothered Perry-Whittingham after that.

DOMINATE MEET
Vic High and Esquimalt scored a major clean-up in the silverware department.

Vic High won both the Roy Jones Memorial Trophy and the Inter-High Track and Field Trophy with a total of 175 1/2 points.

Esquimalt's long-striding Jerry Harris won the senior boys' aggregate with 19 points while school mate Pat Lisle won the senior girls' trophy with 12 1/2 points.

Vic High won the junior aggregate trophies thanks to the strong running of Connie Sampson and Billy Abbott.

OAK BAY SECOND
Final point standings saw Oak Bay finish second with 113 points, Esquimalt third, 80 points, Mount View fourth, 68 points and Mount Douglas fifth, 15 points.

*To new records were set in the track finals although Mount View's Peggy Thomas equalled a mark that has stood since 1948, 12 seconds for the junior girls' 100 yards.

A total of six records fell during the three-day field events earlier in the week.

Farmers Trip Oak Bay Nine

Peter Dixon and Stuart Stout combined forces Friday night to pitch Farmer Construction to a 9-5 Junior League baseball victory over Oak Bay at Beacon Hill Park.

Dixon started for the winners but injured his finger and was replaced by Stout in the fourth. Stout protected the winner's lead for the rest of the game.

In bantam action Friday, Eagles retained their undefeated record by downing Hagel's Chesterfield, 14-11 at Macdonald Park. Winning pitcher Dallas Lansdell hit a bases-empty homer.

Speedway eked out an 11-9 win over Fernwood in a juvenile game at Macdonald Park.

Norman Couch, manager of Quakers of the Western Hockey League, said Thursday night that nothing has been decided yet on the question.

At Delisle, Sask., Doug said: "I have nothing to say about it now and won't likely know for some time what my decision will be."

Frank Boucher, general manager of the Rangers, spent a day and a half in Saskatoon discussing hockey matters with the Quakers' manager, and said he would like to reunite the Bentley brothers, Doug and Max, with the New York Club.

Boucher said that if Rangers could make a deal for Max, the property of Toronto Maple Leafs, and the Quakers would loan New York their playing-coach Doug for one season they would be a big lift to the Rangers and a great drawing card in the NHL.

The Leafs, the Quakers and the Bentley brothers had all been approached, Boucher said, but at the moment nothing definite could be announced.

Couch said the Quakers would give their coach a free hand to decide for himself just what he would like to do to help the Rangers.

Max is not in a position to make a move to another hockey job without first consulting the Leafs' management.

Individuals will have a chance to take over sole possession of first place Monday when they are scheduled to meet Sidney at Central Park at 6:30.

Severson Leads Boxla Scorers

With linemate Archie Browning temporarily out of action, Shamrock's Whitey Severson is making a runaway with the Inter-city Lacrosse League's individual scoring race.

Gorge Vale Golf Semis

Jim Corkle, defending "B" club champion, will be out to remain in the running for this year's title when he matches strokes with Dave Naysmith in the feature match of the Gorge Vale Golf Club "B" championship semifinal flight Sunday.

John Merriman, a former club champion, will meet Bob Johnstone in the championship flight semifinal. The other semifinal match has been postponed as Bob Fleming, recent winner of the B.C. Amateur title and defending club champion, is scheduled for play in the Vancouver Island Open. He was scheduled to meet Dave Fanthorpe.

Draw and starting times for Gorge Vale Club play follows:

FIRST FLIGHT "B"—4:30. G. Corkle vs. D. Burdon, F. B. McKinnon vs. G. Burman.
SECOND FLIGHT "B"—4:45. W. Armstrong vs. G. Thom, B. MacLean vs. M. Carlson.
THIRD FLIGHT "B"—4:50. R. Chapell vs. T. Valentine, B. Porter vs. M. McLean.
FOURTH FLIGHT "B"—4:55. A. Senior vs. A. Clarke.
FIFTH FLIGHT "B"—5:00. J. Carroll vs. M. Hogan, N. Hogan vs. D. Gilchard.

Severson has scored 40 points in eight games, and holds a six-point lead over Rocks' Larry Booth. Browning is third with 29 points.

Students Thump News Dealers

Starting out with a six-run first inning, Chinese Students cake-walked to a 13-8 victory over Grand Spot in a senior B men's softball game at Hewood Avenue Park Friday night.

It was the fifth loss of the season without a victory for the Grand Spots.

Tonight undefeated Tillamucks meet Esquimalt AA at upper Central Park at 6:30.

JOE ISN'T THROUGH YET

CAMDEN, N.J. (AP)—Jersey Joe Walcott, the former heavyweight champion, hasn't retired yet.

The 39-year-old Walcott—some say he is even older—planned to talk over his future Friday night with manager Felix Boccichchio.

That, anyway, is what Felix told The Associated Press when asked about rumors that the Camden Negro was hanging up his gloves for good.

"He hasn't retired yet," Boccichchio said.

THIS AMAZING PROVINCE

Dead Indian Turns Road

By C. P. LYONS

When one sees a barren bench offering not the slightest difficulty to the road builder one might expect a straight piece of road to result, such is the case but not on one section of modern highway between Hedy and Keremeos in the Similkameen Valley.

Here the long ribbon of black top is converted by a sudden twist in its mid-section. There is no rock to be avoided, no deep creek valley to bypass, nothing on either side but a barren gravel flat.

One might seek an explanation in vain for the illogical kink unless he paid close attention to an inconspicuous mound of earth and rocks on the edge of the highway bend. It is exactly where the centre of the highway should be. Road surveyors found it a convenient place for one of their stakes and gave it not one moment's thought.

However, this action was soon noticed by the residents of the nearby Chu-chu-waa Indian Reserve. To them the rough mound marked the time-honored grave of an Indian chief and the dusky natives stood adamant in their claim of prior rights on this small section of flat. To placate them the frustrated engineers had no recourse but to twist the $20,000 a mile highway around the small pile of earth and rocks. The illogical kink will remain for decades as a monument to an Indian victory over the white man's march of progress.

Relaxing Story Of English Life

MIDSUMMER MEADOW, by John Moore, Collins, Toronto, Ont. 256 pages, $2.75.

Reviewed by H. Wyndham Thomas

If you are fed up with Russians, recurring provincial elections, cold wars and hot wars, you will enjoy this.

It is "escape-type" reading, as rustic as a country squire, delightfully written and entertaining, but at the same time it hits out hard at little bureaucratic bodies and their silly little petting-fogging interferences with in-offensive people who just want to be left alone.

The author's opening sentence gives you the feel of the book: "This is mainly the story of one English field, and of a small tragedy which was played out there last summer."

Dr. Tidmarsh, who bought the meadow because it was the last but one spot in England where a rare butterfly grew, is a character that Dickens would regret he never met. A veteran of the RAMC in both wars, he bought the meadow the day Hitler invaded Poland, then went off to do his bit.

At the end of that episode he gave up his practice when the National Health Act became effective "because he had an abhorrence of filling in forms."

Rotund, untidy, absent-minded, perfectly happy so long as "Authority" didn't try to push him around, "he was always for David against Goliath."

Add to his meadow and but-tercup a collection of homeless circus freaks, one mangy lion, a muskrat and lady palmist, plus a pair of newly-weds struggling to make a living in the arts, all of whom he allowed to park their shabby caravans in his meadow.

BOOK TALK

By JAMES SCOTT

A quiet ramble along Canada's literary Rialto always leaves me with what Mr. Arbuthnot would call "mixed feelings." To wit: Enthusiasm mixed with a certain waspishness provoked by bad taste and high-pressure marketing methods.

Traditionally, a book-lover withdraws from the maddening crowd and holes up in a book-lined den, fogged by tobacco-smoke, and here, toasting his lean shanks by a flickering fire, he gives himself over to all the wonder which the creative imagination can offer.

It's a lovely thought, but in these days nothing could be farther from the truth. Today's reader is likely to be found hanging on a strap in a streetcar during the 5 o'clock rush, a pocket book clutched in his grim hand, his eyes straining to accommodate to the irregular rhythms of the car.

He buys his reading matter from a book stall in a cigar store or from a book club or perhaps picks it up from a circulating library.

A few patronize bookstores. In the main, today's reader is just as susceptible to high pressure advertising techniques, just as gullible when it comes to best-seller lists, as the next man.

SOMETIMES CONFUSING. Such readers must have been slightly bewildered in Toronto recently when the literary sections of that city's three daily papers eschewed to tell their readers what books Torontonians were reading most. All three base this intelligence on the monthly list which the Toronto public libraries issue, to the press.

Depending on which paper you read in Toronto you will be rushing out to buy Thomas Costain's "The Silver Chalice," Annemarie Selinko's "Desires," or Grace Campbell's "Torbe."

Never one to have too much confidence in any kind of popularity poll, I still find it difficult to see how three book editors, reading from identical mimeographed reports, could see three different titles at the top of the list.

Incidentally, my copy listed "Desires" first, with "Torbe" second and "The Silver Chalice" third. Personally I wouldn't give shelf-room to the first two and I read No. 3 half a year ago.

VERY BAD TASTE. Our award for the tawdriest contribution to Coronation literature to date unquestionably must go to David Divine (any relation to Father?), for a dreadful novel called "Atom at Spithead."

Originally appearing as a puny novelette in the Saturday Evening Post (which ought to have known better), it has, by some horrible mischance, now got itself between hard covers and is being distributed in this country.

The plot is about how a ship carrying an atom bomb got into a Coronation Day naval review. While crowds line the beaches and all Britain is thrown into a state of panic an intrepid commander of a destroyer drags the threat out to sea and gets away before the bomb explodes.

How anyone could see this as a contribution to anything except to the literature of execrable taste—I'll never know.

Editor Found Haven On Small City Weekly

William Cranston Tells of Turbulent Days in Toronto

INK ON MY FINGERS, by J. H. Cranston, The Ryerson Press, Toronto, 188 pp. $4.

While "Ink on My Fingers" will primarily appeal to newspapermen, it is so interwoven with the last half-century of Canadian history and outstanding figures of that time that it makes enthralling reading for anyone fortunate to secure a copy of William H. Cranston's record-of-56 years in the newspaper business.

It is a modest story of the author's life from a printer's devil to parliamentary correspondent at Ottawa, 29 years on the Toronto Star, including 21 years as editor of the Toronto Star Weekly, and finally editor and owner of the Midland Free Press, the latter a realization of a life-long dream to publish his own newspaper.

Greater part of the book deals with his years on the Toronto Star. Obviously they were happy years for him as he developed the Toronto Star Weekly and had happy associations with the writers and artists who played a part in its development.

TO OTHER FIELDS

However, a touch of resentment at his treatment creeps into the book when, on the death of John R. Bone and the rise of Harry Hindmarsh as the right-hand man of owner J. E. Atkinson, clashes developed which forced Cranston to resign. His faith was also shaken in Atkinson, whom he had regarded as his ideal of a newspaper publisher.

"Although I resented it bitterly at the time, I have reason to thank Harry Hindmarsh for forcing my resignation from the Star Weekly in February, 1933," he writes. "His action opened a door through which I passed into a much happier life than I ever led in my 21 years of editorship."

From there he tells of the satisfaction he enjoyed of being a newspaper owner.

'WE NEED NEW TYPES'

Champion of City Arts Centre Blasts Attitude of Aldermen

By AUDREY ST. D. JOHNSON

There is one general question re civic politics, puzzling the minds of quite a few people around Greater Victoria today. I, for one, hope they will bear it in mind when it comes to voting next December.

The question is, should civic councils not represent and treat equally, all principal functions in a community, and not just one or two more, arbitrary and loud-voiced than the rest?

A number of people feel that this is exactly what has been going on in Greater Victoria for a considerable period.

Unfortunately, voting time will not necessarily provide a solution.

The field of civic politics seems to attract plenty of hard-headed business types, who, as far as they go, are necessary to the smooth running of any corporation.

'INCAPABLE OF EXPANDING'
But the hard heads are too often rigid, too; incapable of expanding to take in the importance of viewpoints and activities outside from their own experience. The time has now come, in the evolution of the city, the province and the country, for a few less insular, more richly endowed intelligences to appear on civic and municipal councils.

We want a bigger proportion of council members who, while they are realistically aware of the sterner side of civic government, are also aware that yachtsmen's floats, fireworks displays, circuses and carnivals do not begin to answer the city's cultural, and entertainment needs.

The recent casting adrift of the Arts Centre is symptomatic of the unimaginative, short-sighted policy we must eliminate from city and municipal chambers if Victoria is to keep up with developments in the rest of Canada and with the needs of its people.

VACUITIES, CONTRADICTIONS

How is one to progress under a composite civic mind capable of the following vacuities and contradictions? The placing of mature Victoria audiences in the kindergarten category by the order to "clean up" the language of an honest, representative social problem play, "Tobacco Road," on the other hand, our youth population unrestrictedly exposed to the pollution of sexy movies, sexy movie magazines and pocket books, sexy, sordid and criminal comic (?) strips!

Complete inability to value at its true worth, such enterprises as the Arts Centre, the Symphony, or any other venture suspiciously regarded as "long haired!"

The welcoming to the city of the brutalizing and uncivilized exhibition of performing animals and zoos on wheels, where wretched creatures are "condemned to endure conditions so obscene (see Oxford dictionary) that they apparently defy the pallid imaginations of our civic authorities!"

In all this is to be seen, surely, a great lack of maturity of viewpoint, to say the least.

"SPINELESS"

As I have said, the city's spineless attitude concerning the Arts Centre is a symptom, but one to be viewed seriously and with alarm by all educated people.

Where there is a will there is a way, is very true in this case. All our city fathers have done is to pass the buck. They have taken advantage of existing red tape to sit back supinely and dust their hands of something they utterly fail to comprehend.

The Arts Centre has shown every promise of becoming a far greater glory to the city than false Tudor fronts and costly arenas are ever likely to be.

CHILDREN KEEN

Do the municipal councils of Oak Bay, Saanich and Esquimalt realize how many of their young people alone are taking advantage of opportunities afforded by the Centre?

Do they know, do the city fathers know, that the Greater Victoria schools recently asked the Arts Centre to set up an UNESCO exhibition of reproductions of great master paintings, and that busload after busload of youngsters toured the exhibition, under guidance of their teachers?

Have they seen the crowds of happy children at the Centre, developing talent, imagination, self-expression, taste and intelligence under expert guidance? If they did, would it rouse them out of their common-place inertia and goad them into doing something about getting together and proudly establishing the Arts Centre as a Greater Victoria possession?

I fear not. We need new types of mentality in council and new policies, for our fair capital is by way of becoming a laughing stock over such actions as the "Tobacco Road" affair and the disgraceful attitude toward the Arts Centre.

Anointing of the monarch with sacred oil precedes presentation of royal regalia in the British Coronation ceremony.

AA (Over-Cloud) BB (Worthwhile)
A (Don't Miss) B (For Rainy Days)
C (To put in time)

(A PLUS) "THE STAR"
(Dominion) — Wandering around showdom's halls, mingling with the "peculiar," one is often struck by the apparent shallowness of these guys and dolls whose business is make-believe.

As Somerset Maugham put it in his novel "Theatre," in effect: when the star makes her entrance from the wings she passes from the unreal to the world of actuality.

This is the actor who plays a role 24 hours a day, whose every waking moment is an effect, a deliberately planted word, a glance, a smile, a shrug, a sneer, a laugh. Everything and everybody is part of life, an act itself.

Star of "The Star" is Bette Davis who carries the lead role with the distinction that she carries her to motion picture fame over the years in such roles as "Mrs. Skeffington," "All About Eve," "The Heavly Creatures," "The Academy Award winning efforts, "Dangerous" in 1935 and "Jezebel" in 1938.

Watching Miss Davis in "The Star" one couldn't help but applaud the casting. After all, who should know better than her how a great star might feel if she suddenly lost her grip through age and fought so hard to regain her place in the cinema sun that she, in the end, loses everything, including her lover, her daughter, and her very reason for living.

HE'S ON AUTO SPREE

Gruber Shelves Baton to Revel At International Motor Show

By HANS GRUBER

This is the time of year when I am expected to leave the subject of music for a while, and instead, assume my other guise, that of Gruber, the "authority" on motor cars. And I put the word "authority" in quotation marks most advisedly.

When I visited the International Motor Show at the Grand Central Palace in New York recently, I was greeted as a long-lost brother by the Classic Car Club of America, which had its own exhibits there, one of which was a prominently displayed picture of my own late antique-diluvian Cadillac.

I was asked to be the guest speaker at the annual convention of the club, which invitation I had regretfully to refuse owing to a clash in schedule with some of my other less widely-known activities, such as conducting orchestras. I have not yet had an opportunity to refuse an invitation to conduct the New York Philharmonic Orchestra.

Since my last year's review of the automobile situation, four cars have appeared in increasing quantities on Canadian roads, all of which merit our favorable attention.

Two of these makes are of English manufacture, one is made in Germany, and one in the U.S. I have now had a chance to examine these cars, and spend some time in the driver's seat.

It is clear that these cars represent a refreshing and much-needed departure from standard practice, and in them are incorporated definite advantages over most larger, heavier and costlier cars.

I speak of the British-made Ford cars, the "Consul" 4 and the "Zephyr" 6, the Vauxhall 4 and 6, made by the English subsidiary of General Motors.

The German car I have in mind is the astonishing "Volkswagen," and the Willys the new American make.

The Vauxhalls and the British Fords are directly comparable, being in the same price bracket and being designed to fulfill identical purposes.

Both the 4-cylinder and the 6-cylinder Vauxhalls are identical in dimensions, the only difference being in the engines, and "deluxe" appointments in the 6.

The Fords have both interchangeable body shells, but the "Zephyr" 6 has four inches more wheel-base, from the windshield forward, in order to accommodate the longer six-cylinder engine compared with the shorter 4 in the Consul. The former has a chassis of 104-inch wheelbase, and the "Consul" 100 inches even, against the Vauxhall's 101 inches.

SUPERIOR LONGEVITY

For the sake of brevity, we shall speak about the 6-cylinder versions only in the cases of both the Fords and the Vauxhalls.

Their engines are of identical cubic-inch displacements, and both are of the latest "over-square" type design, meaning that the cylinder bore is greater than the stroke, both engines having the same bore and stroke measurements of "3.125 by 3.00." This type of design is conducive to low piston-travel per mile, and thus to superior longevity.

The "Zephyr" would seem to have a slight edge in power, its engine being rated at 68 brake-horsepower, as against 64 b.h.p. for the Vauxhall 6.

LEWIS LEWIS—WEEKEND

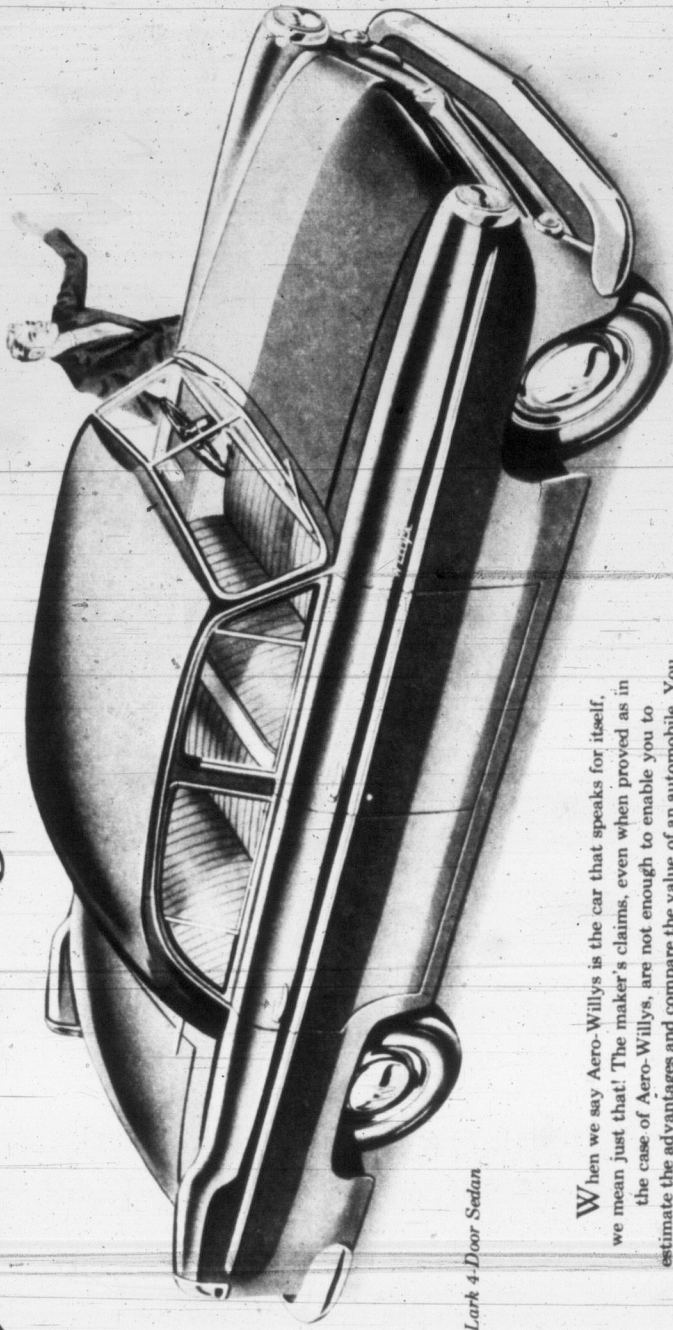

I HAVE never seen a ghost. But I've been one. This establishes me as an authority on ghosts. The first requirement for seeing a ghost is that the proper setting is provided. A graveyard is the ideal setting. The time I was a ghost, we had the graveyard. But more important than the graveyard was the fact that I had a terrible case of eczema. The graveyard was on top of a small hill about the size of a supermarket. Just a little hill. In the middle of the graveyard were the ruins of a stone church the Germans had shelled to smithereens. On the back side of the hill, I and my sergeant had our little dugout. Out on the front of the hill, sloping down to a ruined iron bridge across a little river, were the 38 men of my noble platoon, No. 16. They were artfully disposed, two by two in shield, because the Germans allowed us to build up on the hill and open fire. But we HAD to guard through the dugout. My 38 men were good enough to get in and out of their shell holes back to me nightly for water, ration and orders, they had to pass through that graveyard full of busted tombs, coffin handles, uprooted crosses and those dead wreaths the French like so well. There is no doubt about it, it was a morbid sort of setting. My trusty boys were a little jumpy about the third night. Every time a shell came in, it blew up more skulls and coffin handles. But I soothed them. I assured them if the enemy attacked, I would come out and give them the order to withdraw to the road behind the graveyard. Meanwhile, I had the eczema. The regimental doctor had falsely diagnosed the ailment as scabies, which is a popular affliction among soldiers. He ordered me to slather myself thrice daily with sulphur ointment, and had given me a pound can of it to carry into battle. Nothing worse for eczema could be imagined, so I was one large, continuous eczema from head to toe. In the fitful light of the dugout candle, I was stripped, with nothing on but my socks and boots, anointing myself with sulphur ointment. It was midnight. My sergeant was snoring, eating a can of bully beef with his jackknife and commenting upon my physique with veiled insubordination. I had got myself beautifully slathered, from neck to ankles, when there was the most outrageous roar, and a German barrage fell upon our hill, our graveyard and our beloved platoon, there in front. The candle was jarred out. I made a wild snatch for my steel helmet and leaped out the dugout, crying: "Come on! The bridge post!" For I had to see if the post of two men, right down by the bridge, was safe, and their machine-gun spurring. If not, I would somehow get my

THE OTHER plain-clothes men in the detectives' room looked at Driscoll with embarrassed interest as he strode in, still from the airport, dressed in his best off-duty clothes—a light gray suit. In it he looked taller than usual, as handsome as ever in his crazy dark way.

The chief was looking out the big window into the courtyard where the squad cars were parked and he turned slowly as his secretary and he came in. "Sit down," he said curtly, and then sank wearily into his own leather-padded swivel chair. He passed a hand over his brow and with his eyes still shaded he spoke. "You've heard why we've brought you back from your vacation?"

Driscoll nodded. The chief brought the hand down on the desk top in a sudden angry fist.

"Why would he do a thing like that?" he demanded. "I know him — and he pointed at Driscoll — 'you know him. You've worked with him in the same car, eight hours a day for the last three years. Why would he do a thing like that — Kill the girl?'"

Driscoll shook his head slowly.

"Well," said the chief, "we've got to go out and bring him in just like any other murderer. After he shot Karen he just disappeared." He raised his hands and let them fall and then, as if answering a question he could see forming in Driscoll's eyes, he said, "Oh, yes, it was his gun that killed her. We tested the bullet." He paused. "This is a tough one for you, Driscoll. You were his best friend, his partner — but when I said we would bring him in like any other murderer I didn't mean it quite that way. Maybe if his nature . . . maybe you can bring him in easier than any of the rest of us. I don't want anyone to be hurt."

Driscoll licked his lips. "You don't have to take this assignment, you know," said the chief, looking at the detective closely. "But if you would . . ."

Driscoll nodded again. It would be better for the force, it would be better for the chief. In a way it might be good for the man they wanted too, if anything good could happen to him now.

"Have you any idea where he might go, what he might do?" asked the chief, still watching the other. "Maybe," said Driscoll. "I don't know. I'll take a look around."

The chief slapped the desk with the palm of his hand. "Good. Take young Parker with you. That's if you want a partner."

"He'll go," said Driscoll, and went out through the room of client men in all wondering how it would feel to be going out to bring in your friend to face a murder charge.

WITH Parker at the wheel, Driscoll went first to the Golden Gate, a saloon with some entertainment and a back room where a cold or just bored detective could have a smoke and a drink undisturbed late at night. Pete Papagos regarded Driscoll with dark brown eyes that were limpid with innocence and sympathy. No, he hadn't seen him. Driscoll asked to see the back room anyway. It was empty.

No use going to the apartment. He wouldn't go back there. Besides, Parker had the stories of the neighbors. They had heard him arguing with Karen after lunch, just about the time he usually went out to start his shift. Then the shots, and a man running down the stairs. No, he wouldn't go back there.

"Try some more places," said Driscoll. "Pete Papagos hesitated. When he spoke his voice was softly deferential, like that of an undertaker's assistant. "What kind of places, Mr. Driscoll?" he asked.

"Places," said Driscoll brusquely. "Later it will come to me. I'll avoid an accusing gaze. He was still shutting it from his mind, but even now he knew without permitting himself to think it out, that his knowledge of the man and of Karen had been such that he could not do it. In the meantime, he would let young Parker drive him around while he asked questions to which he already knew the answers."

It was dusk when Driscoll came out of the bowling alley and got into the car.

"I checked with the men at the depot, the airport again. Nothing doing there. Highway patrol has nothing to report. Maybe he's still in town," said Parker. Driscoll motioned to drive on. He gave him an address.

"Isn't that up where your rooming house is?" asked Parker as he swung the car around.

Driscoll nodded. Yes, that was where his rooming house was. In fact, that was the address of his rooming house. The time had come to look into the eyes he had avoided so long.

The black police car came to a stop as soft, as a whisper outside the tall narrow house where Driscoll had his bachelor apartment. He looked expectantly up at the high front. His window looked almost friendly with a light in it.

"What do we do now?" asked Parker. Driscoll got out of the car slowly and reached into his hip pocket.

"You take this," he commanded. "It's your gun," said Parker. He looked up at the house. "He's armed, you know."

Driscoll nodded. "I know. You take this back to headquarters. Tell them to send the wagon . . . and the coroner."

"The coroner?" asked Parker shifting excitedly in his seat until he was half out of the car. "How are you going to kill him without a gun? This guy is crazy . . . Parker checked himself. "I know he's a friend of yours, but he's killed once today. He might kill again."

"I know all about that," said Driscoll wearily. "Do as I tell you."

DRISCOLL waited until the car had pulled away. And then he began to walk slowly toward the house.

It was a good thing the chief had sent him. This, of course, was where the hunted man had to be, waiting for his friend Driscoll, who had betrayed him. Driscoll paused at the door and straightened his shoulders, but as soon as his hand touched the knob he felt light, relaxed and almost glad.

After all, with Karen dead he wasn't sorry to be dying.

IN the daily drama of the operating theatre the most important actor, next to the surgeon and the anaesthetist, is the instrument nurse. Her watchful eyes anticipate the surgeon's every move; her swiftly-moving, dextrous hands keep instruments neatly arranged so they can be seen and picked up quickly; she removes soiled sponges, prepares sutures, places specimens carefully to one side.

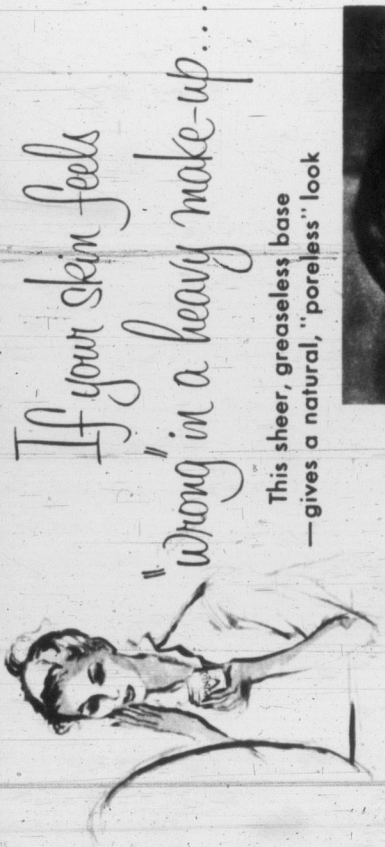

The end result of her efficiency: valuable minutes saved which reduce the operative shock for the patient. It is exhausting, nerve-racking work (an operation lasting five hours is by no means unusual); so exhausting, in fact, that only two per cent of the girls who take up nursing in Canada express a preference for it. Yet Doreen Richmond, 23-year-old instrument nurse at the Royal Jubilee Hospital in Victoria, B.C., finds the job so fascinating after two years at it that she would not consider any other. "No two operations are ever exactly the same," says Doreen. "And never a day passes without some different problem being posed."

If your skin feels
"wrong" in a heavy make-up...

This sheer, greaseless base —gives a natural, "poreless" look

Many women feel uneasy in a heavy make-up. If your complexion doesn't like a heavy foundation—you'll love this feather-light powder base! Before you powder, smooth on a protective film of Pond's Vanishing Cream. See how it disappears at once... leaving a wonderfully soft, greaseless base for your powder. No streaking or discoloring. No shade problem. Your complexion looks finer-textured, smooth, natural—stays lovely, longer!

Special one-minute facial clears off "choked" pore openings

Now—a remarkable at-home treatment that clears off clinging dirt and dead skin particles—brightens, freshens your skin. Just cover face, except eyes, with a lavish 1-Minute Mask of Pond's Vanishing Cream. Its "keratolytic" action loosens and dissolves off dried, dead skin cells from choked pore openings. After one minute, tissue the Mask off. See how much more alive your skin looks!

SEE—on your own hands—the "keratolytic" action of Pond's Vanishing Cream! Chapping, rugged outside dissolves off. Hands look silky-smooth, alive.

The Lady Maureen Cooper

The lovely daughter of a Scottish Earl has a delicate, fine-textured skin that looks its loveliest in the softest, most natural kind of make-up. For her powder base, Lady Maureen chooses Pond's Vanishing Cream. "Besides perfecting the skin," Pond's make-up base is so naturally flattering."

WHAT A DAY!

What a misery it can be on those days when you are feeling way below par. If you slowly feel the hours drag by when you feel weary and sluggish and seem to be all over.

And how unnecessary it all is, very often. Most times that dull, lousy feeling is the direct result of constipation and kidneys not working properly. You need something more than a simple laxative these times. You need Kruschen Salts. Millions the world over have learned the benefits of Kruschen... the salts that are like those in the waters of famous Mineral Springs. Acting in two ways at once, laxative and diuretic (for sluggish kidneys), Kruschen helps rid the body of waste matter. It goes right to the cause of that miserable, sickish feeling that constipation brings about.

Get some Kruschen today. Less than half a teaspoonful can make you feel better all day long.

CABBAGE ROLLS

Containing rice and meat, they are a complete meal

ONE of the best recipes I ever collected for cabbage rolls was the one dictated to me one afternoon in Ottawa by the wife of a Slavic diplomat. Five years have passed since that afternoon, but I still have her recipe for Goloubitzky, which is still a favorite in my house. Her recipe calls for minced beef or, if you prefer, you can try an alternate recipe which calls for sausage meat. Either way, the dish is a good one for a supper on a lazy Saturday. If there are any leftovers, they are wonderful fried the next day. Both recipes are for six to eight servings.

GOLOUBITZKY

1 medium cabbage
1/2 cup rice
1/2 cup chopped onion
Paprika
Sour cream

1/2 lb. minced beef
1/2 cup rice
Salt and pepper
4 tbsp. butter or fat

BOIL cabbage in salted water until leaves fall away easily. Be careful not to pierce or break them.

BOIL rice in salted water until almost cooked (about 10 minutes). Drain.

COMBINE onions (raw or fried) to minced beef with salt and pepper. Add drained rice. Mix well.

PLACE cabbage leaves separately on baking board and spread generously with meat mixture.

ROLL each cabbage leaf carefully, turning in ends and securing with a toothpick.

FRY cabbage rolls gently in fat for 5 minutes, then place in a deep pan in oven.

POUR sour cream over rolls, sprinkle with paprika and bake in a

CABBAGE ROLLS WITH SAUSAGE

8 large cabbage
leaves
1 1/2 tbsp. butter
1 1/2 lb. sausage
1 chopped green pepper
1 tin condensed
tomato soup

MELT butter and saute pepper and onion for two minutes.

ADD cooked rice and sausage meat. Turn off heat.

COOK cabbage leaves in boiling, salted water for three minutes.

DRAIN and dry well on a towel. DIVIDE meat mixture into eight parts and spread on cabbage leaves.

ROLL leaves and secure with toothpicks. Place close together in a buttered baking dish.

Beast of Prey

He started up toward the house after a while, carrying the fox by its tail, and he got into the kitchen just as his father was hunching up his suspenders. "Well, I'll be a so-and-so!" his father exclaimed softly as he took the animal and hefted it. Then he took it to the foot of the stairs and hollered, "Hey, Mom! Hit the deck! The young lad's got a fox for you to fry up!"

The kitchen was full in no time at all, and everybody made a big fuss. Even his mother, who should have been horrified to learn that her son had been out alone with a rifle.

And when they were all crowded around him like that, with everyone talking at once and patting him on the back, the boy felt fine again. He even felt like the hero he had dreamed of being the day before.

"Well, lad," the hired man said as they got up from breakfast an hour later, "that makes you a man, you know. You remember how it was with the Indians, don't you? You didn't get to be a brave until you made your first kill. After that, you could call yourself a man. And you could travel around with them."

But after the excitement and the glamor had died down a bit that morning, and when he was alone again between the rows of corn he was supposed to be hoeing, the boy found himself fighting back again at the same question which had made him kick at the rock. The worst of it was that it was something which he had to fight alone. For it would be much too childish of him to ask an older person about it, and he knew there was probably no good answer, any-how.

The silly thinking about it made him so lonely after a while that he hung his hoe on the fence and went down to the field beyond the henhouse, where the two dead chickens still lay in the sun. He took one in each hand, looked around to make sure that no one was looking, and went back along the creek and then up along the rim of the woods where he had last seen the whimpering pups. He threw the chickens as far into the woods as the bushes would let him and then he turned back.

He felt a lot better now, but he didn't go back to the silence of the corn rows. Instead he went up to the barnyard, where his father and the hired man were busy making a pig crate and laughing about something.

- 2 eggs
- 1/2 cup milk

Method: Place new Jewel in bowl. Sift together flour, sugar, baking powder, and salt into bowl. Add 1/2 cup milk and almond flavouring. Beat 2 minutes on low speed, or by hand. Add Group I ingredients, 150 strokes per minute. Keep batter scraped from sides of bowl. Add Group II. Beat for 2 minutes more. Scrape bowl and beaters. Pour batter into cake pans. Bake at 375°F. for 25 minutes.

FILLING AND TOPPING

- 2 tablespoons corn starch
- 1/2 cup fruit juice
- 1/2 cup fine sugar
- 1 pint whipped cream
- 1 cup strawberries
- 1 cup cold water

Combine corn starch and sugar. Mix with cold water. Add this mixture to fruit juice. Add few drops of red food colouring. Cook over direct heat till thick and clear, stirring constantly. Cool.

Divide filling into two bowls. To one, add 1/2 cup whipped, sweetened cream. Spread between layers of cooled cake. Add 1 cup strawberries to remaining mixture and top cake. Decorate sides with whipped cream and chopped nuts. A striking, delicious way to have your own strawberry festival!

WHEN THEY'RE VISITING

By Marcia Winn

VISITING is behaving. This is a basic principle of conduct, which the earlier it is impressed upon a child, the better off everyone—and we mean everyone—will be.

There are few things more trying than the little guest who is a little terror. It is trying, and beyond a certain age it is inexcusable. What is that age? No younger than four, no older than five. By the age of four the average home expects and has obedience. Certain rules of conduct are established. (As established by the age of three, but let's not quibble.) By five, tolerable table manners also are expected. There can be will, and are deviations from these in the privacy of a child's own home. At home he can occasionally get away with the equivalent of murder, but his mother should let him know quite precisely that while it can happen here, it can't happen anywhere else.

We all want our children to be popular. Otherwise, how explain Durand's great success? Children to go visiting, and parents there to have them so, never asked out, and we all know that. We know it of other children, that is. Do we suspect it of our own? It is doubtful. We think the other mother, the one who doesn't ask little angel back, just doesn't want "to be bothered" with children. The truth is that she is happy to make her home a centre for her children's friends, but that she doesn't want to be bothered with children who won't behave. You can control your own one way or another. To try, futilely, to control another's, and to have your house wrecked in the attempt, isn't worth the trouble.

Confidence Banister

Not to impress upon little Willie the obligation to act decently at other's homes is as cruel to him as it is to the brave and self-effacing and in the long run thoroughly demoralized mother who has consented to give him asylum for lunch or the afternoon. He wants to be asked out. It is a great treat, a change. He can't wait to be asked again. But if he doesn't behave, he'll wait a long time, possibly forever. Take our word for it. There is only one reason why he didn't behave. Why didn't he? He didn't learn to. The fault is the fault of his own home. If you don't teach him, how is he to know?

thought. "Blame it all, he's too far out!" He waited for an agonized moment for the fox to come closer. The fox should come closer. The rooster was still hanging around the door. But he didn't, and the furious fear of losing the shot completely took hold of the boy.

"He's sitting still now," he thought. "And even if he comes in closer, maybe he'll be moving so fast that I'll never get a bead on him."

So he took a breath of air, held it till the last, faint trembling went out of the barrel, took one final look at his quarry, and squeezed the trigger. The fox gave an astonished leap, ran forward a few steps and then doubled back toward the woods. The boy wanted to cry. "If I'd only waited!" he said aloud. "But no, I wouldn't!"

The desperate hope that perhaps he had hit the marauder came to him then. Maybe the fox hadn't gone very far. He went out of the henhouse on the run, but when he came to the place where the fox had sat, he could see nothing. "I've lost him!" he cried. "Blame it all and blame me for a fool. I've lost him!"

Then he saw the first bright splash of blood. Then another, and finally a trail of blood spots. "I've got him!" he breathed. The excitement flamed so high in him that he couldn't hang on to it, and he turned his face toward the house and yelled at the top of his lungs. "Come here! Come here, everybody! I've got him!"

Then, as fiercely eager as any other beast of prey, he took up the trail.

The fox was lying about fifty yards away where the field fell down into the creek. It had crawled into a tangle of purple iris, and there it lay, with the breeze making bits of gray in the bright orange fur. The bullet had struck him square amid-

HAVE YOU A WIZARD-WIFE?

Does she find the unfindable and fix the unfixable?

By Bruce West

CARTOONS BY PETER WHALLEY

ONE of these days some research wizard is going to win undying fame by coming up with the answer to a question that has been bothering husbands ever since Eve showed Adam where to find the apple tree.

It was down there in the southeast corner of the Garden of Eden right under his nose, all the time.

The question, briefly, is this: What mysterious gimmick is there in the female makeup that so often makes a wife turn out to be right when any three-year-old myopic idiot can plainly see that she's wrong?

We have, for instance, a husband comfortably settled in his favorite chair reading his favorite book and smoking his favorite pipe. His wife casually asks him to run down the cellar—it's always run, never walk—and get the large preserving kettle for her. This kettle, she says, is sitting on the shelf right over the laundry tub.

So he goes down the cellar for the kettle. Upon arriving in front of the laundry tub, he can see no single sign of this

"The XL-243 condenser is burned out," he says, but—kettle. However, if he is a husband of fairly long standing, he is much too crafty and experienced to just yell up right away and inform his spouse that the kettle isn't there.

Slowly and with infinite care, he combs every square inch of the area surrounding the laundry tub. Not only does he examine the top of the shelf, he looks under it and on each side of it.

Finally, however, he must give up. He arrives at the decision that the kettle simply isn't there, that's all. But, just to make a final and positive check, he runs his hand all around the shelf, like a suspicious volunteer from the audience at a magician's show.

But the kettle isn't there. There's not even any sign that it was there. Taking deep breath and one last reluctant glance over his shoulder toward this barren shelf, he retraces his footsteps to the kitchen and informs his help-mate that the kettle isn't there.

"Of course it's there," she says impatiently. "I put it there this morning."

Trying desperately to remain good-natured and broad-minded about such little eccentricities, her husband gently explains that this kettle can't possibly be there. He suggests that she shouldn't feel too badly about it, because the best of us make little mistakes now and then. But the kettle isn't there, and let's face it.

So the wife patters rather indignantly down the steps followed by her husband and his tolerant smile. It isn't long, however, before this tolerant smile is abruptly wiped right off the poor guy's pan and replaced by that old look of dismay and horror.

Because his wife walks directly to the shelf over the laundry tub and picks up the preserving kettle. Don't ask him how it got there. Don't ask me, either. But it's there.

If a man has been married for some time, his wife usually goes floundering off swinging this kettle without saying a word. If they'd only say something, it might not be so bad.

In my own case, I am troubled by the fear that one of these days my wife is going to send me down the cellar to bring up a horse, or maybe even a giraffe, and I'm not going to be able to find it. Certainly I'm not going to look doubtful if she makes such an odd request. The monotonous experience of finding out later that she was right would be far too humiliating. Of course, this habit of finding something that isn't there is not the only uncanny example of the peculiar built-in radar that makes wives so exasperating when you're trying to be logical with them. This is just one small but infuriating facet of the whole thing.

I remember once seeing a movie in which the hero was about to fall a large tree. His wife, who obviously didn't know what she was talking about, remarked that she floured the tree would be bound to fall right across the chicken coop.

My heart bled in sympathy for this poor fellow when he lowered his axe and patiently explained to his wife that he'd once worked in a lumber camp for two full seasons and knew how to bring a tree down not only within a foot of where he wanted to fell it but within the exact inch. He then told her to step back out of the way and mind her own business, which sounded like a fair enough suggestion to me.

Well, when the tree finally came down, where do you think it landed? Of course. The thing crashed down smack across the roof of the chicken coop, caving it in with a sickening splinter. I don't remember crying so hard at a movie since the last time I saw Away Down East.

The mechanically successful manner in which wives play by ear in mechanical matters is another thing that has driven more than one good husband to strong drink.

The radio, we'll say, goes on the hummer. The husband peers into its workings and comes up with the straightforward information that the XL-243 condenser has obviously burned out and will have to be replaced.

His wife, however, looks up from her knitting and volunteers the completely ridiculous suggestion that if the picture over the mantel is shifted one inch to the left, the hall light is turned on and the door jamb is given three sharp kicks, the radio will play beautifully.

"I don't know," says this husband, slowly clenching and unclenching his fist in a supreme effort to keep cool. "The XL-243 is gone. I tell you."

"I've built 14 radio sets of my own at one time or another and I was one of the first home owners to get a licence in this country. And I'm telling you that you'll have to forget the radio until I can replace that XL-243 tomorrow, dear."

"I didn't know you were ever a licensed radio engineer," she says innocently—much too innocently it seems to me. So he settles down to read the paper. But a few minutes later, his wife remembers that Mournful Maggie Cassidy, Girl Cab Driver, is on the air. So she shifts the picture over the mantel one inch to the left, turns on the hall light, gives the door jamb three sharp kicks, and the radio begins to play beautifully.

I told that one husband, faced with this kind of outrageous mockery to his common sense, seized a fowling piece and shot the radio full of holes.

No one has ever given a satisfactory explanation of why wives are like this. Are they protected in their foolishness by some crafty goddess who is out to drive the male sex mad? Of one thing I feel fairly sure. If a really successful defence is ever developed for the atom bomb, it will probably be discovered by some scientist's wife who has been fooling around trying to fix the pop-up toaster with a bobby pin.

His father scratched up under his hat and then looked off over the fields. "I'll give you one bullet," he said. "Just one. Second shots are nearly always missed up with excitement. They're dangerous. I'll give you one bullet—and don't bother telling your mother."

He could have hugged his father or turned a somersault, but he kept his face straight and all he said was, "Thanks. I'll be careful," and when they got out to the field to pick stores he fell to work with such vengeance that his father had to tell him to take it easy.

He took a clock to bed that night, but he didn't set the alarm. He knew he would wake up in time and he didn't want to wake his mother. He hid the rifle under a raincoat in the hallway, and the bullet, which his father had slipped to him under the table at supper, he kept beneath his pillow.

The first time he woke it was eleven-thirty. He woke again about one, and from then on it seemed that he was picking the clock off the floor every half-hour. At four, he got up and dressed and took the bullet from beneath his pillow. He went down the stairs hunting to the wall to keep the freak out of his steps, got his rifle, and called the dog in from the mat outside the kitchen door. The dog looked up at him and set up a little whine of protest, but the boy motioned for silence and set the door firmly between them. Let the dog out and it would spoil everything.

Outside, he tried to wait until his eyes became accustomed to the dark, but the pressure of the cold and the excitement wouldn't let him stay still for long. He moved out beyond the wake of the house and slowly swung around to see which way the wind was drifting. What there was of it was west.

A FOX could unroll a man a mile away if you didn't keep circle away around to the east of the henhouse, and his feet began to have trouble with unexpected stones and hollows. The fence well-nested up at the foot of the orchard, and the boy almost blundered into them before he saw the white coat of the garden on guard and backed off. It would have been a sad thing indeed if they had started to holler.

But finally the long, low shadow of the henhouse came up before him and once inside, some of the tension drained out of him. From now on the hardest part was the waiting. The henhouse windows had once been part of an old church, and when his father had worked them into this building, he had never been able to fit glass into the parts that curved to make the peak. In the winter these were carefully covered with two ply of grain sacking, but now in August there was nothing here but wire netting, and it was at one of these that the boy took up his post. Beyond that window lay the open field in which the morning's massacre had taken place, and two of the dead birds were still out there.

"All right," the boy said to himself, "come again, you yellow streak of misery! Come any old time you like now!" Stiffness and cold came with the wait. The sky turned gray in the east and the hens on the roosts behind him began to mutter. After a while the cough of a recently-awakened motor drifted up from the distant side road and the boy thought, "That's Herb Prentice starting out to the city with the egg truck. It's five o'clock."

The crowd which the boy was watching finally began to take shape and grass bunches and stones began to climb out of the dark. So did the bodies of the dead chickens. Then there came one startling moment when he thought that he could see the fox. He was so certain of it that he poked the muzzle of his rifle through the netting and drew a bead on it. Then he remembered that he had but one bullet, and he took his finger off the trigger. It would have been a heart-breaking disaster if he hadn't, for the coming of a little more light melted the fox into a cherry bush.

He rubbed his eyes and slackened his nerves. "He won't come yet, anyhow," he decided. "Not for any old dead stuff. He'll come when the chickens first start flocking out into the yard, and not before."

A rooster split the silence with such a terrifying burst of crowing that the boy almost pulled the trigger again. "Crow another time," he said. "Go ahead. Maybe that will bring him."

But the rooster crowed twice more and there was still no sign of the fox. "No," the boy concluded, "that fox'll probably not come a step till he smells fresh meat scratching in the henyard."

A SUDDEN impulse came to him then, and he pulled his rifle out of the window, leaned it in the corner and went back to the roost, where he worked his hand cautiously along till he had the rooster by the legs. Then he lifted the offended bird clear, came front again and shoved the bird through one of the little trapdoors which led into the yard. Then he took up his post again. Outside, the rooster took a few important steps, sucked in a breath or two of the cold air and let out a call that cut the morning like the shriek of a train.

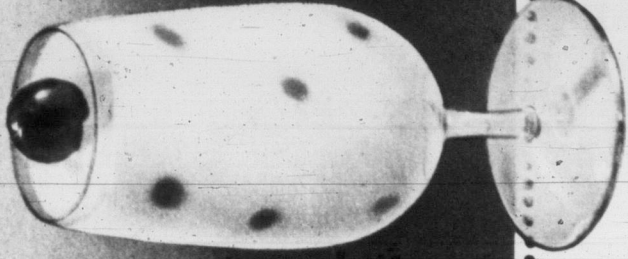

The effect was magical. The fox came bounding up out of the shadows before the last echo of the crow had lost itself in the woods beyond. Only he didn't come quite close enough. He stopped a good twenty yards or more beyond the choke-cherry bush and sat down.

The boy licked the dryness away from his lips and pressed his hot cheek tightly against the sun butt. Over the slats he could just barely make out the sharp ears and the bushy, ornate tail which the animal had wreathed about its hindquarters.

"He's too fat!" he

One sly fox had upset the household, and the boy had just one chance to get back at him

By H. Gordon Green

HE CAME downstairs early that morning because he was vaguely aware that some sort of excitement in the barnyard had been, nibbling away at the edges of his sleep, and when he got into the kitchen, where his mother was stirring the porridge pot, he saw right away that she had been crying.

His mother blew her nose and jammed a stick of poplar into the stove. "There's been something at my place this morning. Didn't leave me more than half of them!"

The boy said "Damn!" and shot out through the back door before he had settled all the way into his shoes.

Back of the chicken house a couple of dozen variously mutilated chickens lay in a pile, and his father, the hired man and the collie were out in the long grass looking for more.

"A fox for sure," the hired man was saying. "Blood-thirstiest critters God ever let live."

"I shouldn't have locked the dog up last night," his father said.

And the boy, looking at the butchery and thinking of his mother back at the stove trying not to cry about the winter coats these chickens were to have bought for the girls, tightened his fists in his denim pockets and thought, "Why, the dirty, lowdown streak of misery! I'm going to get him if it's the last thing I ever do!"

Too bad the Almighty wasted so much brains on such vermin, the hired man said as he threw another dead chicken on the pile.

His father said, "Better take the heads off the ones that aren't torn too bad. I think they'll still bleed enough so we can eat them."

"I'll borrow some traps," the boy thought tightly. "I'll borrow every trap on the side road. And if I can't get him that way I'll find his hole and dig him out. I'll dig him out if I have to drill half way to China to do it!"

Suddenly a new idea took hold of him. "I wonder if Dad would let me have the rifle?" he thought. It made him shiver a little just to think of that.

"It's only when they've got young ones about that they play nob with a whole flock like this," the hired man went on. "The country must be getting lousy with foxes these days."

HIS FATHER took one of the slain birds, stepped on its head and pulled the body free. "Yes, they bleed pretty good yet," he said. "Here, lad, take a few of these up to the back porch and after breakfast maybe you can help your mother pluck them."

So he went up to the house again and laid an armful of chickens on the porch table. His mother's face was still grim and his two kid sisters, who were up now, were putting their clothes on with unusual quiet.

"She's been checking girl things out of that mail order catalogue for over a month now," the boy thought. "If it was for herself, this probably wouldn't have fazed on her at all. But it was going to be for the girls."

He went over to the basin to wash up for breakfast, and when she came near enough he said, "Don't worry about it, Mom. I'll lend you some of my peach-picking money. And I'm going to get that fox, too. See if I don't!"

But he didn't get up the nerve to ask about the rifle until after breakfast. Then when they were out in the barnyard and his father was backing the mare up to the stoneboat, he said, "Dad, if I was to get up in the morning while it was still dark, and if I was to wait in the henhouse, I think I could get that fox. If you'd let me have the rifle."

THE hired man began to laugh a little. "Maybe you don't know how smart a fox is," he said.

Defensively, the boy said, "They always come just at dawn, don't they? That's what you said yourself! And this one's got to come back if he's going to pick up those dead chickens, won't he?"

"Been having trouble with foxes off and on for forty years," his father told him as he tightened the belly-band. "And I never outsmarted one yet."

The boy turned his back on the hired man. "I'd like to try. I'm eleven now."

His father took off his sweaty hat and slapped a horse fly from the mare's flank. "You ever shoot that rifle before?"

"You—you never let me," the boy said, blushing.

"But you've been sneaking it out anyhow." His father squinted his eyes to look up at the lightning rods up on the ridge of the barn. The bulb on one of the rods was only half there. "I often wondered how come the lightning could bust a bulb and never blacken it," he mumbled, clicking to the mare.

The boy jumped on the stoneboat and they rode off, leaving the hired man getting ready to load manure. "I'll be careful," he said.

Bill Spears finds his job agreeably remote from world worries

Photostory by Robert McKeown
and Bert Beaver

WEEKEND Staff Writer and Photographer

IT IS A popular belief that lighthouse keepers suffer both from loneliness and idleness. But this has not been the experience of Bill Spears, whose Cove Island light flashes out into the stretch of water between Lake Huron and Georgian Bay.

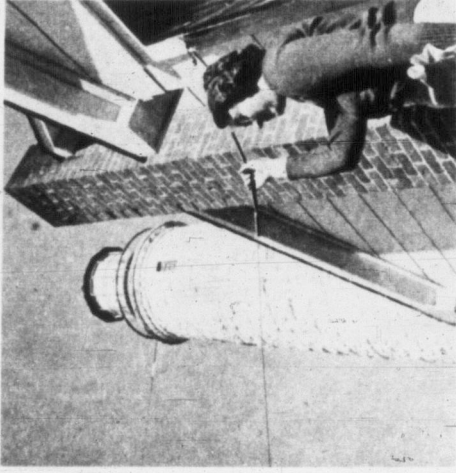

On the contrary, Spears finds his duties keep him occupied practically seven days and nights each week. As for being lonely, the idea never enters his head. He was six months old when his father became the lighthouse keeper at Flower Pot Island, not far from his present location. He was 17 when he became an assistant lighthouse keeper. In all, he has spent 31 of his 42 years on lights, with interludes of absence caused by the depression and the war. But even four hectic years overseas in Italy and Northwest Europe as a company sergeant-major in the infantry did not break him of his desire to return to the peaceful life of tending a light.

LIGHTHOUSE KEEPER

Lighthousekeeping involves much more than climbing ladders and turning on the big lamp each evening. Spears' formal qualifications are: lightkeeper, second class; fog alarm engineer, third class; and radio operator, second class. His responsibilities include maintaining communications with the Midland coastal station and with other lights by Morse code and radio. There is also the radio beacon that regularly transmits the Cove Island signal, the letter "D." This enables the lake ships to fix their positions by direction finder. And there is always the necessity to be on the alert to set the light's horn blasting whenever fog starts to creep in toward the island.

This means that Spears and his assistant, Jim Nagel, stand watches throughout the night (their shifts are 8 to 2 and 2 to 8). And during the foggy months of May and June, this entails making minute-to-minute observations for visibility.

Signal for meals at the lighthouse is a blast on the foghorn. Spears' wife, Dora, pulls cord.

A weird photographic effect is produced as Spears cleans one of lighthouse's six prisms while his son, Billie, 4, looks on.

better ROOMING

BY ELIZABETH WOOD

Face First

Next to a well-roomed appearance, the face is the deciding factor in making impressions. Good skin tones and well-applied makeup are necessary, and one way of achieving the desired effect is to clean the face properly for each new application. This is done best at home when you have 15 minutes to spare. Find the cream best suited to your skin—those with lanolin are good for dry skins. And if you can find the time, give yourself a daily creaming and steaming over a hot bowl with a towel wrapped around your head.

USE PLENTY OF CREAM

Tie your hair back with a ribbon or a towel and remove your lipstick and mascara with a tissue. Apply lots of cream with both your hands, and pay particular attention to the nostrils, corners around the mouth, under the lip and back of the neck. Always use a gentle upward-outward motion, and the strokes should be gentle so that the skin is not stretched.

STROKE UPWARD

Beginning at the throat base, cross hands and press strokes upward. Do this several times until you see some of the cream disappearing. Do the same thing from chin to ear, then from nose to forehead and then the bridge of the nose to the forehead. Concentrate on the eyes and use a circular movement under the eyes and on the lids—very lightly. These areas should be soaked with lubricating cream—particularly when you're more than 30 years old. Pat the eyelids gently with two fingers—one at a time.

SKIN FRESHENER

After your face has soaked in most of the cream, you can remove all the remainder with a skin freshener. Use it on a piece of cotton and it will take away all the cream, leaving your face feeling fresh and stimulating. A fast way of cleansing is to dampen a piece of cotton with freshener, dip it into a jar of cream and wash away the dirt, makeup and old motions. Rub off with still another application of freshener.

Looking after engines and equipment is another big part of the lightkeeper's job. There are foghorns and beacon engines, air compressor and boat engines. There are buildings to be painted, repairs to make after storms, and general maintenance all the time. Since the light is isolated in stormy weather, the Spears raise part of their food supply. They keep chickens as well as pigs, and have their own vegetable garden.

A PART from summer, when tourists sometimes drop in by boat, the Spears family are their own company. During the school term, Dora Spears spends much of her time in town with their two daughters, Ila Marie, 12, and Lynda Kaye, six. At some light stations the children take correspondence courses, but the Spears believe in having their children educated with other boys and girls.

During the winter months when the light is shut down, the Spears live in the village of Tobermory, on the mainland. Spears has plenty of time to renew acquaintanceships, take the occasional trip to Toronto and go hunting.

However, Spears is never one to be inactive for long. He works with a boat builder and does carpentry to put in the time until the spring breakup.

Spears' constant companion is four-year-old Billie. He is completely happy at the light—combing the beach debris for hidden treasure, romping over the rocks, and following his father on his rounds.

If he misses the friendship of other youngsters, he gives no indication of it. His parents have tried in vain to get him to stay with his sisters in town, where he would have playmates of his own age.

Bill Spears admits that his type of life does cut him off from the main events of the time. Newspapers arrive a week late. He does not hear radio news reports because they get interference from the light's radio beam, which transmits on the hour.

"I've been through half a dozen world crises without ever knowing about them," Spears says.

The lightkeeper, a reserved, quiet-spoken man, does not appear to regret his isolation. He's proud of his light and his home on rocky Cove Island, and he thinks his son Billie might well follow in his, and his father's, footsteps. Spears is of inventive mind. He likes to work with mechanical and electrical equipment, and to devise new ways of doing things. He finds compensation in the natural beauty of his surroundings, in the moods of the lake, and in watching the passing ships. He also has the satisfaction of knowing that he is playing an important part in seeing that the ships' cargoes of grain, oil and coal reach their destinations.

"Besides," Spears adds, "you've no one standing over you. That's the beauty of it."

Lighthouse Keeper (Concluded)

From the parapet Spears watched a passing ship. When his light is shut down from mid-December to early April the winter light shown here is left burning.

Life at the light is busy but happy

Like her husband, Dora Spears must be a jack of all trades. She runs a winch that lowers to water's edge a gasboat used to carry supplies from the mainland.

Fisherman Joe Gamache drops in to get weather report, which is transmitted by wireless key from the Department of Transport coast station at Midland, Ont.

Dr. W. Sherwood Fox, London, Ont., holds chestnut plants grown in the greenhouses of University of Western Ontario.

ONE MAN'S BATTLE

Dr. Fox carries on a solitary crusade to save Canada's sweet-chestnut trees

"MY FATHER," says Dr. W. Sherwood Fox, of London, Ont., "was a Baptist minister. I was brought up in the belief that, in some way or another, each person should be a missionary. The doctor shows this quality when he strives for greater cures; so does the parent who wants his child to have even better opportunities than he himself had."

Fox, an elderly scholar, has carried his philosophy into what, on the surface, appears a strange field. He is waging an altruistic, dedicated battle against a blight that threatens to make Canada's sweet-chestnut tree extinct. He started the battle, on a small scale, in the 1920s. But it was not until 1947, when he retired after serving as president of the University of Western Ontario for 20 years, that he was able to devote a good part of his energies to it. He will not see the results in his own lifetime.

A classical archaeologist by training, Fox is a botanist by inclination. He speaks sentimentally of the days when he would wander into a forest and stand near a mass of chestnut trees, bright in their green foliage and dangling catkin flowers. "The trees bore their fruit about mid-October, with the first frost," he recalls, "and then boys and squirrels competed to see who could get there first."

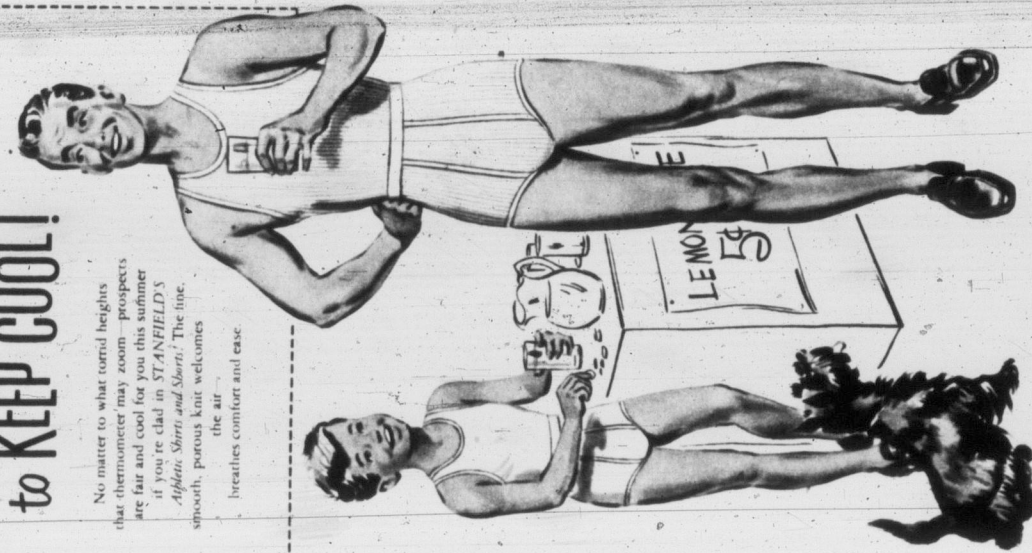

Economically, the trees had great value. As late as 1920, the farmers of southern Ontario alone garnered an annual crop of chestnuts worth $2,000,000. The durable wood, too, was in demand for furniture, wharf pilings and boat interiors.

All this has changed. A plague has turned whole forests into what Fox describes as "outdoor illustrations of Dante's Inferno"—stark remains of

YOU WANNA BEAT THE RACES?

MAYBE it actually happened. A fellow in the Department of Agriculture at Ottawa tells me a letter was received from a Torontoian the other day which went like this:
 "Dear Sir: I have decided to invest $1,000 this year in wagering on horses. To spread same over your tracks fairly, I am allotting $250 each to Dufrin, Woodbine, Thorncliffe and Long Branch. Now, would you kindly send me some literature on how to improve my investment?"

Gag or not, the query has some sense. Today finds Ottawa — officially and unofficially — tolerating betting by Canadians of some $90,000,000 annually on racing outbursts across the country — or about $6 for every man, woman and child. So why not some sage betting counsel from informed government sources such as is given in industrial, agricultural and other kindred multi-million dollar Canadian enterprises?

Perhaps a telegram service might even be introduced on Parliament Hill for the taxpayers.

From Montreal: "What do you think of Hot Stuff in the sixth at Blue Bonnets?"

From Vancouver: "What do you like for the quinnella today at Lansdowne Park?"

From Calgary: "I'd like to double my money on a Daily Double at Victoria Park. How?"

This governmental information service, possibly to be known as the D.D.T. (Dope Data Transmission) Bureau, would naturally be limited to the six Quebec-and-West provinces, because those six alone carry official recognition and sanction for pari-mutuel betting on running-horse racing. According to the Department of Agriculture, wagering in the six provinces last year totalled $74,440,977 — about $5.50 for every man, woman and child.

(By cities, Toronto's $28,194,822 topped all, with Vancouver's $9,691,971 second. Then, in this order, came Fort Erie, Ont., Winnipeg, Hamilton, Edmonton, Montreal, Niagara Falls, Calgary, Ottawa, Regina, Saskatoon and Millerville, Alta., with its one-day, $2,512 meet.)

HARNESS racing sees another $23,000,000 wagered (Quebec Province bets at least $11,000,000 annually) despite its unofficial status. Reason for same is that, in most areas, it openly violates the restrictions set by Article 235 of the Criminal Code.

Add it all up—the official and the unofficial—and you get $90,000,000 worth of horse interest in Canada which, if you'll pardon the expression, ain't hay.

Also, it ain't no sin, because Ottawa sanctions in one case and tolerates in the other the greenbacking of one's horse favorites.

So-o-o, let's look into the subject. Of course, everyone doesn't lose all the time at the track, and a human trait prompts "winning days" to be given priceless word-of-mouth publicity in social groups and office circles while losses are shrugged off. By the same token, race-track "killings" get international publicity.

Don't listen to touts. They usually tip off groups on different horses, collecting from winning group.

Only last November, world-wide publicity was drawn by one Cyril Neville when his Dairay won the Melbourne Cup classic at Australia at 5-1 odds and Neville cleaned out the country's bookmakers to the tune of 63,000 pounds (about $141,000).

In 1929 at Haddock Park, England, the sedate wife of a Liverpool physician named Answorth, recklessly gambled two shillings on a glue-factory candidate named Cooley and was the sole winner — taking home the equivalent of $1,705 in Canadian currency.

When Pittsburgh Phil (real name George E. Smith) died a few years ago, the gambling world was astounded to read that the former cork-cutter had failed to take an estate of $1,900,000 with him. He had built his fortune through a meticulous, private information-gleaning organization that cost him $1,000 per day.

MARCUS DALY, the copper king, trained his Ogdens in secret in 1896, entered it in the Futurity at Sheephead Bay, laid bets across the country and made a million dollars on the one race. Bill Cowan, the famed no-limit Saratoga bookie, lost $250,000 one year on the New York season, shifted to Saratoga, where he won $750,000, then moved on to Belmont, where he lost the bundle in a month. Yet he died rich.

They're the stories that get publicized. Yet, even the notorious, sure-thing better, Arnold Rothstein (later killed in action by a bullet during a poker game), dropped a quarter of a million bucks one afternoon betting on a 1-6 favorite. And John W. (Bet-a-Million) Gates lost $50,000 betting against his own horse!

"The only logical way to play the horses," an old-timer once told me at Saratoga, "is to get a good system and stick with it."

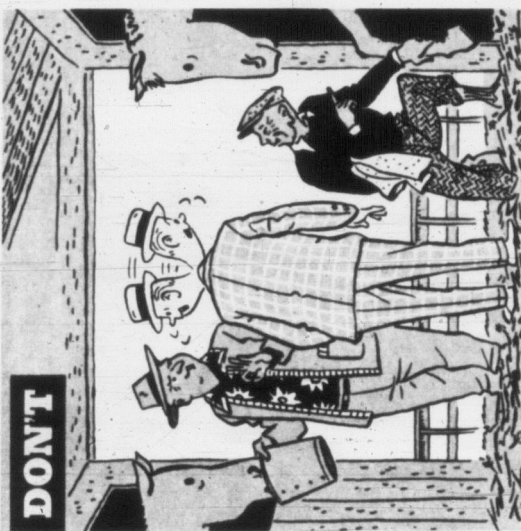

That rules out both "hatpin" betting (sticking a pin through the program and betting on the pierced names) and "inside info" betting.

The latter method is based on getting one's wagering wisdom from touts, dope sheets or trainers.

The touts and dope sheets are plain sucker stuff. Usually the clients are divided into groups and each group tipped off about a different horse. So a collection is made from which ever group that wins.

As for trainers, no matter how honest, they do get enthusiastic. If you talk to three of them you're liable to end up with three "sure things" for the same race. And owners get their gen from trainers.

How about a "good system"? There are oodles of 'em. Involved ones such as the Over-lay Method, the One Out Of Five Claiming Method and the Don't listen to trainers. They're all enthusiastic. You'll end with several "sure things" for same race.

BETWEEN TIMES

By MONTE ROBERTS

I have been sitting here staring at a blank piece of paper for what seems like hours, trying to think of something funny to say about the baseball situation. The only conclusion I have reached so far is, it ain't funny.

See you at the ball park Monday—puh-lease.

I was much amazed to read reports of the Nanaimo Social Credit meeting addressed by Premier Bennett.

Until reading about this meeting, I had not realized the innate modesty of the man.

He stated unequivocally his party would not win all 48 seats in the coming election, but will merely come close to that number.

Premier Bennett should see a psychiatrist. He is obviously troubled by an inferiority complex.

If Premier Bennett should ever retire from politics, he would be a welcome asset to any traveling theatrical troupe.

He certainly knows how to fill a theatre.

G. J. Brockhurst of Newton Street has sent along a clipping from one of the Vancouver papers, about which he is a little indignant.

VICTORIAN HEIRLOOMS AT TEA FRIDAY

Mr. Brockhurst feels this is a rather flippant way to refer to the residents of this fair city.

Of personal interest, mainly to me: Buried in the sere and yellow files of the Victoria Daily Times is proof that your Between Times is no Johnny-come-lately to the columns of this newspaper.

This morning I dug out the bound copy of an edition printed many years ago and found the first news item in which I was involved:

ROBERTS—On May 24, 19—censored, to Rev. A. E. and Mrs. Roberts, a son.

Curt, clear, concise and complete, as all news stories should be.

So tomorrow, with your permission, I will celebrate my 30th birthday.

Again.

Happy birthday, dear Monte, happy birthday to me.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES

The annual meeting of the Kipling Society will be held at 317 Cook Street May 27 at 8 p.m.

A "Parade of Bands" contest and dance held Friday evening at Colwood Community Hall, awarded first place in a popularity contest to the Colwoodians.

Over 200 people attended to vote on performances of four orchestras, Colwoodians, Forsters, Langford Merry-makers, and the Belmont High School, which won second place. Winner received a shield plaque.

Proceeds went to the St. John's Church Parish Hall.

Annual general meeting of the Illuminating Engineering Society, Vancouver Island Chapter, will be held Monday at 8, at 716 Pandora Avenue.

William H. Pillinger, 272 Palisier, was fined $25 by Magistrate H. C. Hall in city police court Wednesday for failure to have 1953 validation tabs on his car while it was parked on a public street. Earlier report on this court action said that Pillinger was charged with the offense while driving the car.

Two men who have served most of their lives in prison appeared in city police court today and got six-month prison sentences from Magistrate H. C. Hall for shop-lifting offenses at a local department store.

Pleading guilty to charges of stealing articles of under the value of $25 from the department store were William Doak, 69, and Jack Mair, with no fixed addresses.

The national employment office reported here today there are vacancies for stenographers and typists and an urgent need for waitresses. Most sought though are domestic workers, including day-workers, chambermaids, cooks and laundry workers. A dietitian and a lab technician are required too. Men are wanted as bus drivers, ship platers, glazier, knitter (needleman), boiler-makers, meat cutters, sales clerks, railway telegrapher and auto spray painters.

Members of the Victoria Branch Concert Party, British Columbia Employees' Association, entertained residents of Mountain View Home Friday afternoon. Grace Adams and Dick Higgins led the 12 entertainers. Gifts of tobacco were distributed.

An offer of $4,000 for vacant property on the south side of Fort Street between Pemberton Road and St. Charles Street, has been accepted by city council.

Ralph Wentworth Brooks of Royal Oak is the purchaser of the land, which reverted to the city from a 1940 tax sale.

Organized on May 23, 1873, the Royal Canadian Mounted Police is 80 years old today. Assistant Commissioner A. C. Rivett-Carnac, chief of the B.C. division of the well-known federal force, reported today that there will be no British Columbia ceremony.

POLITICAL POT

Tory Leader Deane Finlayson jumped into the pokes-about-politicians contest with this one aimed at Premier Bennett:

"Premier Bennett was boarding the Kettle Valley train to the Interior when the conductor spotted him."

"The conductor turned to the porter and said, 'Sam, you'd better make up a bunk for the premier.'"

"Sam answers, 'No, need to, sah, the premier makes up his own bunk.'"

Politicians have been asked to submit their best platform jokes to the B.C. Humor Society. They will be locked up in the Vancouver archives with instructions to be read June 1, 2053.

The society is anxious to see if political jokes will still be funny 100 years from now.

Cowichan-Newcastle Seated candidate Percy Hawkins has refused to attend an all-candidate meeting May 24 "because I refuse to campaign on a Sunday."

"I'd go any other day, but I simply won't go out campaigning on a Sunday," he said today.

Liberal Leader Arthur Laing explained to a Dawson Creek audience this week how 40 excited people caught up with Premier Bennett in the Kootenays and demanded the premier take action on the law-breaking Sons of Freedom sect.

As a result, Mr. Laing said, Premier Bennett sent off a wildly ill-advised telegram to Ottawa.

Said Laing of Bennett: "If this fellow had got any more excited he would have had his clothes off before the Donkeyhobbs had a chance to take theirs off."

Social Credit will capture all 10 Vancouver Island seats June 9, Premier Bennett told a Royal Theatre audience Thursday night.

Associate Defense Minister Ralph Campney in Vancouver said: "He's just whistling to keep his courage up."

MEETINGS TONIGHT

8 p.m.—Victoria PC candidates Robert Patch, Monte Drake and Arthur Chapman and Esquimalt candidate Dr. Norman Goodwin, at Boilermakers' Hall, Esquimalt, with Maj. Gen. G. R. Pearkes.

'Tobacco Road' Ends Victoria Run in Red

Management of the York Theatre appeared relieved today that after tonight they would be able to post a "road closed" sign.

"Tobacco Road," the controversial play which they had thought was going to be a sure-fire box office success, has been a financial bust.

The show, which ends its scheduled nine-day run tonight, has been costing the theatre money.

B. B. Milnes, York manager, revealed today that box office take Friday night was $88. He said it cost $250 a day to keep the theatre in operation.

Publicity given to "toning down" of the show had been as effective as detour sign, he claimed. Yet, changes made to show here from what it had been in Vancouver were insignificant.

Cast members appeared as anxious as anyone to take their show on the road, and leave Victoria behind.

BOOSTING PRICES

Seatleites will be paying more to see the show than Victorians. Prices there will be $3.75, $3.25, $2.50 and $1.50. The York's price range has been $2.00, $1.75, $1.50 and $1.00.

Dorothy Davies, director of the show, returned to the cast today to play "Sister Bessie Rice" at both afternoon and evening performances. She left last Monday after complaining that because of police censorship of the play she just didn't have the heart to continue in it. The York people are hoping to recoup their loss on the "Road" show by bringing to town next week the French farce, "Nina," featuring a Vancouver cast. It will open Monday and play through to Friday. The Indian opera "Tziniquan" will follow, playing Saturday night and all the following week with the exception of Coronation Day.

Shrine Spieler

GET THEM while they last, warns Shriner Bob Wallace as he checks the tickets to the grand pageant and dance, to be held in Memorial Arena June 5. Affair is one of highlights of the 50th anniversary ceremonies of Gizeh Temple, to be attended by 4,000 Shriners.

More than 1,000 marchers will take part in uniformed patrol manoeuvres at the arena, and nine bands will be featured. Tickets go on sale Monday at the T. Eaton Company, will be sold only between 2 and 4 p.m. daily—while they last.

Police said the small truck finished up in its wheels. About $500 damage was done.

SUNDAY SERVICE MARKS VICTORY

Religious services to commemorate the "Battle of the Atlantic" will be held at 11 a.m. Sunday on the lawn of the Legislative Buildings, with close to 1,500 officers and men of the RCN Pacific Command in attendance.

Personnel will form up in front of Memorial Arena at 10 a.m. and march off at 10:30. Following the service, Rear Admiral J. C. Hibbard, FOPC, will take the salute in front of the Empress Hotel. March past will be at approximately 11:45.

Election Act Bans Buttons, Orchestras?

Are Premier Bennett and his Social Credit followers breaking the law by wearing "Social Credit for Good Government" buttons?

This question is being kicked around in political circles these days.

There also seems a possibility that provision of music at election meetings, such as that at the Royal Theatre for the premier's meeting Thursday night, is against the law.

Someone dug down deep into the Elections Act and found Section 167 prohibits candidates or agents to hand-out election ribbons "or other mark of distinction." The latter certainly would seem to include lapel buttons.

All parties in the past have been guilty of providing music at election meetings.

But there is a way to get around this law, and possibly the political parties have thought of it and thus are within the law.

Section 167 says payments made for music are illegal. Party officials might be able to get an orchestra without charge, or they may get the price of the hall with the orchestra thrown in.

Thus, in a sense, the party is not hiring the orchestra. The hall proprietor is.

Regardless of such loopholes, however, political chieftains this week-end will be studying this old law.

Straith to 'Smoke Out' Premier on Liquor Act

If Premier Bennett won't come out of hiding—and make public the terms of B.C.'s new liquor act, W. T. Straith, QC, is going to smoke out the facts, he says.

He told an election meeting in K. of P. Hall Friday night he had written a second challenge to the premier to disclose his proposals. "And if he won't produce, we're going to smoke him out," he said.

Mr. Straith wrote the premier 10 days ago, asking that the public be told all about the liquor act, which the government has acknowledged was printed and ready for submission to the Legislature at the time of the government's defeat.

Mr. Straith revealed Friday he had had no reply, so sent another letter.

The second letter read in part: "I hope that you are neither afraid nor ashamed of your policy on this important question; and I again challenge you to give your new act to the public so that the policy of your government may be known to the electorate in plenty of time before June 9. 'Surely there should be no necessity for secrecy in this connection.'"

Mr. Straith told his audience he felt the liquor question was one of the most important issues in the election campaign and one of the most controversial.

"We've said what we're going to do. It's time we heard from them."

Push-Button Service Here

CUSTOMERS CAN'T ARGUE

Silent Smoke Salesmen Set to Serve City

Victorians will soon be able to purchase cigarettes from a vending machine that does everything but light the first smoke and take the initial puff.

A battery of slot machines with built-in brains which can count change, answer your brand preference, slip you some matches and disdaintly belch out the most cunningly contrived slugs is already in the city.

They will be distributed prior to July 2, when they will be legalized by city by-law. The B.C. Liquor Control Board approved their use in beer parlors last month, subject to municipal approval.

The first 50 silent cigarette servers have been snapped up already, according to Vic Little, president of the new company which will service the machines.

Though the dispensers are fairly new to western Canada, Great Britain and the United States have had them for years. Proprietors of premises where they are placed get a commission on sales. The machine owner pays the license, sales tax, relieves the dealer of worries of pilfering, employee mistakes, overhead and buying and checking stock.

It will sell 10 popular brands for 35 cents a pack, including tax and a book of matches, but can be adjusted to suit price changes.

Smokers may not realize that there are only 20 matches in a book . . . one for each smoke in a regular package, so machine buyers won't be top-heavy with matches.

Through the same coin slot, the clever gadget takes any combination of silver. It will return coins if too much or too little is deposited, and a special "what's-it" can be attached which will make change.

Mr. Little says Victoria is showing the way to Vancouver, where objections that children may be able to buy cigarettes more "tidily hold sway."

In this respect he adds that Victoria installations will only be in places where there is proper supervision.

An earlier experiment, a candy bar dispenser, showed charitable tendencies. When Mr. Little tried it on a group of youngsters it yielded the candy and returned the money too!

He recalls that he didn't have the heart to recover his loss, but has kept the traitorous device in "solitary" ever since.

The kids can't understand it. They think it is the best invention ever.

Fear of Major Strikes Fades

Transit Workers Vote to Stay On Job; Seamen Ballot Monday

Fear of two major strikes on Vancouver Island and the lower mainland faded this week-end as a result of last-minute discussions between trade union bargaining committees, members and employers.

A possible street transit tie-up was averted when 2,800 members of the Street Railwaymen's Union in Victoria, Vancouver, and New Westminster voted to accept a 7½-cent hourly pay increase and a 15-month contract dating from March 1, 1953.

Seafarers' International Union, whose 700 members had voted to strike in support of their demand for a $50 monthly wage increase, will vote Monday on a $30 increase and union security clause.

These terms were reached at a meeting of union negotiators and representatives of the Canadian Pacific, Canadian National and Union Steamships in Montreal. Strike deadline had been set for tonight.

CLOUD ON HORIZON

Largest cloud on the labor horizon is the dispute between the 32,000-member International Woodworkers of America (IWA) and Forest Industrial Relations Ltd., representing 162 coast logging and lumber operators.

Conciliation officer Robert Fongie, who failed to settle the dispute arising out of the IWA demands for a 15-cent across-the-board increase, union ship, and other terms, recommended a conciliation board.

Date of the board hearing should be announced late next week following constitution of the board.

The IWA has chosen Robert Smeal of Victoria as its nominee on the board. Mr. Smeal is president of the Victoria Labor Council (CCL) and western representative of the Canadian Brotherhood of Railway Employees (CBL).

A four per cent wage increase is now being voted on by 4,000 employees of the B.C. Telephone Co., and results should be known in 10 days. The company offer was placed before the workers without recommendation from the Federation of Telephone Workers of B.C.

Retail Grocers and Food Clerks' Union, representing 500 food clerks of Victoria, Vancouver and New Westminster, has reached agreement with Canada Safeway, B & K Economy Stores and Super-Valu Stores.

Terms call for reduction of the work week from 44 to 42 hours, with provision for implementation of a five-day, 40-hour week and no reduction in pay when certain statutory changes have been secured.

There will also be an upward revision of wages for journeyman clerks up to a weekly wage of $65.94.

Architect Lets Tender For $44,000 Building

BY R. T. FREEMAN

A two-story reinforced concrete building costing $44,000 will be built for architect Patrick Birley at Gordon and Courtney, it was announced today.

Contract for the job has been awarded to Luney Bros. & Hamilton Ltd.

Ground already has been prepared on the site between the architect's existing offices and the Belmont Building. Actual construction will begin next week.

Imperial Oil Co. is building a new service station at 1609 Fort at a cost of $26,000. Parfitt Construction Co. Ltd. is the general contractor.

Designed by J. M. Garbert, the building will be of concrete block construction with concrete floors and bonded tar and gravel roofing.

Commonwealth Construction Co. have secured contract from Scott & Peden Ltd., feed and provision merchants, for the erection of a mixing and storage bins at 1617 21st Street S.E., costing $20,000.

Steel frame hoppers with laminated bins and cross conveyors are specified in the contract.

SEPARATE CONTRACTS

Awarded as separate contracts, C. J. McDowell Ltd., is doing the heating and plumbing and Colin Fensham the electrical work on the Charles Dale store building at Douglas and Courtney.

Farmer Construction Ltd., the general contractors, report framing up on the main floor. Owners plan to occupy the building by August.

Tenders closed this week with Architect Charles E. Craig for the visitors' centre and museum to be erected on Woodward's corner at Douglas and Humboldt.

Contracting firms bidding on the project include Luney Bros. and Hamilton Ltd., Farmer Construction Ltd., George H. Wheaton, Dillabough & Luney, McKinley & Sons, all of Victoria, and Provincial Construction Ltd., Vancouver. The contract will be awarded next week.

Dillabough & Luney, on a bid of $7,182, will build the tourist sightseeing office to be occupied by the Blue Line on provincial government property at Belleville and Government Streets. Steel frame, asbestos and plate glass go into the construction.

Q. What is the most plausible explanation advanced for the mystery of the ship Mary Celeste that was found afloat and in good order but abandoned in the Atlantic by her crew and passengers?

A. Of all the speculations on the subject, the strongest possibility is that she ran aground on a temporary sandbank, and was abandoned in panic, afterwards refloating when the sandbank dissipated; lifeboats carrying the crew and passengers, it is assumed, were subsequently sunk with loss of all aboard. Uncharted sandbanks which later vanished have been observed in vicinity of the route the ship would have taken on her voyage from New York to Genoa.

Besides drawings, paintings, fancy work, modeling, cut-outs, photographs and so on, we are getting a lot of friendly little letters these days from members telling us about birthday parties and holidays.

Like everybody else, I like to get letters, so this week some of the letter writers will find their names in the prize list. The first three of the winners are letter-writers.

Here's the list:

Dolores Woods, 3841 Hobbs Road, Victoria.

Sheila Ross, 5720 East Saanich Road, RR 2, Royal Oak.

Johnny Johnson, 128 Olive Street, Victoria.

Sheridan Dave, 47 Dock Street, Victoria.

Answering one member who missed the announcement, the Uncle Bob Times Review has been postponed. There were so many things on in the date set in June that a lot of the young performers couldn't take part so another date will be set later.

And that is all for today as there are so many magic tricks, riddles and jokes we want to get in this week we will take no more space.

RIDDLE

What is it of which we have two in every year, two every week, and at least two in every day?

A community of small cottages designed to meet the needs of elderly people on limited incomes will for all time exemplify the motto of the Victoria Kiwanis Service Clubs. . . . "We Build!"

"Looks good to me!" says Mrs. E. Brown, as she looked at the modern kitchen of the finished unit now on display.

"Should be a lot of friendships made here," said Mr. J. McMullen. "It looks to me as if it should be a very happy place to live!"

A special scale model of Kiwanis Village, complete with trees, shrubs and green lawns, is on display at the cottage site, so visitors may get a picture of the finished project. Mrs. F. T. Donegan, 3555 Beach Drive, was interested in the fact that each cottage has a small patio with front and back garden. Also, that the plan allows a reasonable amount of privacy, with not one front door facing on a back garden.

There are going to be some very happy elderly couples when the choice of residents is finally made," Mrs. H. A. Heatley said, as her eyes took in the modern layout of the village.

Good soil, plenty of room for vegetables," said Mr. T. J. Farley, as he pointed with his cane to the unit he liked best. Mrs. H. Heighes, standing beside him added, "Yes, and look at those windows. You'd get sunshine all day long!"

A Dream That Nears Reality!

Chosen two years ago as Victoria Kiwanis Club's major service project, "Kiwanis Village," as it has been named, was first a dream . . . then a blueprint . . . and finally the outline of a community of small cottages in a parkland setting. When complete the village will contain 38 homes, self-supporting with low rentals . . . with the Kiwanis Club looking after maintenance, payment of taxes to the city and other service costs. Total cost of the project is estimated at $234,000. In addition to the amount provided by the service club a sum of $60,000 is needed. It is hoped to raise this amount through public subscription, the drive to get under way next week. IT WILL BE THE FIRST AND LAST MONEY-MAKING DRIVE TO BE HELD IN SUPPORT OF KIWANIS VILLAGE.

In one of the first groups to see the village, as it looks today, was Alderman Margaret Christie, long a champion for the aged and infirm of Victoria. With a group of businessmen was Dr. W. G. Wilson. "Wish I could qualify for one of the cottages myself," he said, after he had seen the first finished unit.

Choice To Be Made!

Applications have already been received from persons wishing to live in the village but no action has been taken on them yet. Selection of residents will be on a "point basis" with applicants being asked questions such as length of their marriage, whether they had any sons or daughters killed or injured in the war and many other queries to help determine the definite need of such living quarters. Kiwanis Village will be directed by the Kiwanis Village Society, registered under the Societies' Act, and made up of members of the club. Edward Mallek is president of the board of directors. For the next few weeks, provincial and civic officials, business and professional people and organizations will be shown over the property. Later, the general public will be invited to visit the village.

"You could keep a lot of duffel in these drawers," Mr. I. W. P. Jackson said, as he and his wife were taken on a tour of a village unit. Mrs. Jackson smiled her complete agreement.

All Right, Girls! Let's Dress Up in Blue Jeans

By PENNY SAVER

Do more in denim! Specially if they're faded blues. . . . Yup! They're back again this year, and as popular as ever! Full-length jeans are $2.95, which is also the price of the pedal pushers. . . . Okay! I know you're wondering why the pedal pushers aren't any cheaper! . . . Well, in the first place, they have a stripe trimming on the cuffs, as well as a white rope tie at the waist. . . . Truly nautical-looking! Faded blue shorts are identical to the pushers, except for the length. Price? Let's see. . . . Ooops! They're $2.95, too! Don't you dare ask me why!

Come on, girls! Let's buy a whole outfit of these snappy denim! Gosh, a jacket with stripe trimming to match the pedal pushers and shorts is only $3.95! A perky peaked cap is 98 cents.

If baby plays patty-cake with his porridge before eating it, you'll want to get him a bowl to keep it warm. A sturdy porcelain bowl with a picture of the piggy that went to market on the bottom, fits into a metal container that can be filled with hot water. . . . $1.95.

Run for your lives! It's "Dennis the Menace," and he's on the warpath again. . . . In laughable cartoons on paper napkins and aluminum foil coasters. Swell for parties! The coasters are suitable for ash trays, too. Both sets are a dollar a box.

Our American visitors will go for a sterling silver bracelet of dogwood links. A truly distinctive souvenir of British Columbia, they cost $5.50.

It looks like an ornament, but don't be fooled! An attractive metal leaf in an antique finish would look smart hanging on your wall. . . . and it's also useful in the dishpan. This "magic" leaf cleans the silverware while you wash the dishes. That's right, just place it in the dishpan. There'll be no harmful rubbing or caustic boiling to keep your silver bright and shiny, now!

AS WE LIVE

Daytime 'Dating' Is Fine For Young Teenagers

By ELIZABETH B. HURLOCK, PhD

When boys and girls begin to grow up, they want to be together. Whether time so spent will be wholesome or not, depends to a large extent upon what they are permitted to do and what opportunities they have for making the right friends. This young girl wonders whether what she is doing is right:

(Q) "I am 13 years old and my boy friend is 14. After school we take walks together round and round my block. Some people say I'm too young and some say that I have to start some day. I think there's nothing wrong with going walking with a boy during the day. There would be if I went at night or if I went parking with him. Lately he has been asking me to go to a show with him. Do you think I am too young to go with a boy?"

(A) You are not too young to go out with a boy provided you limit your dates to simple, daytime activities. I can't see anything wrong about walking around the block with a boy after school.

Why not ask your mother if you may bring him to the house after your walk and have some refreshments? This would not only be the courteous thing but it would give the stamp of "parental approval" to your dates with him.

As for going to a show, there would be no reason against it if it were in the afternoon. If he suggests going at night, don't even ask your parents' permission unless you are going with a crowd. I am sure they would feel that you are too young to be going on night dates alone with a boy.

It's a good idea to go with boys occasionally in the early teens. This is the only way you can learn how to talk to boys and behave casually when you are with them. It is wise, however, to go with several boys instead of just one. In that way you learn how to be at ease with boys as such, not just with one boy.

Traveling Overseas? You May Choose A Complete Outfit for Only $335

By AUDREY ST. D. JOHNSON

Has it ever occurred to you to wonder what people are taking to England this summer of 1953, and how much it's costing them?

I asked actress Elizabeth Knight, who starred this season with the former York Players and who left for England last week-end if I might go shopping with her and, bearing in mind a moderate budget, here are some of the answers.

First Elizabeth was guided by three points: maintaining freshness and grooming with a minimum of laundry problems; general simplicity and packability and that each article selected should have a maximum scope in her wardrobe.

Materials we looked for, then were nylons and orlons that rinse and shake out in a twinkling and need virtually no ironing, and soft, fine cottons that wash and iron like rags.

Initial travel choice was a knitted suit in a wedge-wood blue, at a bargain price of about $30. This supplied warmth for chillier days, is light and takes kindly to packing.

WASHABLE HAT

We found just the hat—a matching blue angora with a tiny stiffened brim and soft crown that tucks away like a powder puff folded into tissue paper. Washable, of course.

Coats are musts, so we chose next an oatmeal wool shortie that looked smart over the knitted suit and would gallantly top any summer dress. $45 added to the budget!

Next came an all-weather coat in a soft blue-grey treated rayon material, which could be worn swinging or belted. Lined with a gay rainbow taffeta, it had matching belt that could be tucked into a pocket or pulled on at a jaunty angle if the wind was blowing. At $35 this was for us, we decided!

First choice when we get to dresses was a navy nylon sheer with an ever-pleated skirt, the pleats repeated on the bodice in a graceful cross-over front, and on the sleeves. So simple, yet so dressy, it could be worn from lunch time on through the cocktail hour into evening. Its unbelievably low price, $19.95!

A good times dress that could begin its reign at five and swirl gracefully through the evening, cool or warm, was our next selection.

ameter, the top gauged and to be worn with or without straps; the finishing touch, a graceful circular capelet. We paid $26.50 for this fascinating item.

Every wardrobe must contain one play dress. Elizabeth liked a fine cotton with a big cut ground, patterned in dark blue and jade green. The strapless bodice was shirred and cuffed over the bust and was complimented with a darling little bolero. $19.95—said—the price tag.

ONE LUXURY ITEM

Orlon and combed cotton in a rosy beige, with accordion-pleated skirt and neat, tailored details in high pocket flaps and twin rows of mother-of-pearl buttons, added a smart and practical all-day dress to the collection. This was $25.

Now came one real extravagance . . . something for the slightly more formal occasion. We chose a pure silk organza model in a delicious cool lime with the new halter neckline; the only trimming, white embroidery and heading encircling the top of the corsage. The waltz length circular skirt flared over stiff net and taffeta underskirts.

Elizabeth found the perfect hat to go with all her dresses, a cocoa and white Milan straw with a sandwich brim, for $13.95. Worn without the two Elizabeth's only handbag was a capacious Italian straw in a neutral shade, costing $4.98. She carried it plain with the knitted suit, but charmingly clipped on a bright posy to pick up color accents when worn with other dresses.

The total cost of our wardrobe? About $335—and we're ready for anything. Come rain, come shine—or even an invitation to Buckingham Palace!

Presentation to Col. Perron

During the early-evening reception held Friday in the officers' mess, Bay Street Armoury, by the commanding officer and officers of Canadian Scottish Regiment (Princess Mary's), Col. A. Perron, commander of Esquimalt Garrison, was presented with a farewell gift from the regiment, a polished wood mug edged with silver and etched with the regiment crest. Lt. Col. Walter Mosedale, commanding officer of the regiment, made the presentation.

During the evening, commanding officers of the services and other distinguished guests were escorted into the mess to the music of the bagpipes played by Piper McKay.

Shower for Miss Collison

A decorated wishing well held shower gifts for Miss Daphne Collison, whose marriage to Lieut. Edgar Alfred Wiggs, RCN, will take place in June. Mrs. Howard Knott and daughter, Dorene, who will be maid of honor at the wedding, were hostesses at their home on Rockland Avenue.

The bride-elect was presented with a corsage of white carnations and sweet peas, and her mother, Mrs. Noel Collison, received a corsage of pink, mauve and white sweet peas.

Those invited were Mrs. Brian Hunnings, Mrs. W. A. MacIntosh, Mrs. Clifford Collison, Mrs. H. T. Knott and Misses Joan Hodge, Lyn Marshall, Beth Collison, Liz Oliver, Mavis Barnes, Beverley Knott, Hazel King, who presided at the tea table, and Ann Collison, who assisted in serving.

Bridge Club Dinner

Members of her bridge club entertained at a dinner party at Chez Marcel, Friday evening, to honor Miss Mary Armon, who is leaving Victoria the end of the month to make her future home in Montreal. Covers were laid for eight, Mrs. A. Stevenson, Mrs. F. Petrie, Mrs. Eric Dowell, Mrs. R. G. MacDonald, Misses Sylvia Morrow, Hilda Kyle and Joyce McCuaig.

A presentation was made to Miss Armon, and later the group returned to Mrs. Stevenson's home for bridge.

Former Victorian on Visit

Mrs. A. E. Roberts came from Vancouver this afternoon to visit her son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Monte Roberts. She is staying at Strathcona Hotel. The former Agnes May Monteith, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. George Monteith, residents of Maitland Street, Victoria, and widow of Rev. A. E. Roberts, one-time pastor of Victoria West United Church, Mrs. Roberts has many friends in this city.

Coronation Ball Across Border

Under distinguished patronage of Governor and Mrs. Arthur B. Langille and under sponsorship of 24 British Societies of Seattle, a Coronation Ball is to be held Monday evening, June 1, at the Olympic Hotel. The proceeds will be presented to the Seattle Children's Orthopedic Hospital.

Frank C. Ogden, British Consul-General and committee chairman for the event, announced today that approximately 1,000 attendance is expected at the ball.

Informal dress may be worn. Entertainment features planned by the various committees are to include presentations by the Seattle Pipe Band, music by Jackie Souders and his orchestra including special selections, dancing novelties and songs and exhibition dances by Alan and Kaye Hall.

Coronation balls are also being held on the West Coast in Portland, Los Angeles and San Francisco.

Members of the committee, who have been several weeks planning details, include: Mr. and Mrs. F. C. Ogden, Mr. and Mrs. R. F. Quarterman, Mr. A. G. New, Mr. Jack Ironside, Mrs. James M. Donahue and Mr. Robert D. Seal.

Miss Sara Spencer left this week by plane for London and the Coronation. En route she spent a short time in Vancouver with relatives.

Mr. and Mrs. William Donaldson are visitors in Victoria from Belvedere, Calif., and are staying at the Empress Hotel for the next few days.

Holidaying at Grouse Nest, Sooke, during the past week were Mr. and Mrs. E. Roberts and family of Salt Lake City; Dr. and Mrs. W. M. G. Wilson and family and Mr. and Mrs. E. Baynes and family of Vancouver and Mr. and Mrs. D. Volinn of Seattle.

Fred C. Ashley, of USS Scabbardfish, docked in Victoria this week, was honor guest when his aunt and uncle, Mr. and Mrs. Wallie Coutts were hosts at a dinner party at their home on Glasgow Avenue. Covers were laid for eight. He was also entertained by his grandmother, Mrs. Mae Beechcroft, 735 Pandora Avenue.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Skelly and Mrs. Gardenheier motored to Victoria from Riverside, Calif., and spent a few days at the Empress Hotel before traveling north on the Island Highway to Sproat Lake for several days' visit. They will return to the city today and leave again this week-end for their California homes.

Among Victorians invited to Vancouver today for the wedding of Miss Sheila McGivern and Mr. Peter Bentley are Mr. and Mrs. R. D. Davis, Mr. and Mrs. B. Russell, Mr. and Mrs. F. E. Winslow, Mr. and Mrs. O. B. Browne, Mr. Desmond O'Halloran. Other invited guests include Mr. and Mrs. Charles A. McAllister and Mr. and Mrs. H. A. West, Qualicum Beach.

A Vacation in Eastern Canada

Miss Margot Young, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. H. Maitland Young, Humber Road, is leaving next Wednesday to visit relatives and friends in eastern Canada. On June 27, Miss Young will be a bridesmaid at the wedding of her brother, Mr. Robert Brock Young, and Miss Coleen Minty-Dwyer, in Montreal.

Receives Abbey Invitation

Miss Nettie Proven, child welfare division of the provincial government, will represent Canadian Welfare Council of Canada at the Coronation and will be seated in Westminster Abbey for the ceremony. She leaves Victoria on Tuesday for Vancouver, where she will be joined by her sister, Miss Anna Proven, who is to accompany her. They will travel by plane to England. Following the Coronation the sisters will spend a month in Paris, studying history and French respectively at the Sorbonne. Daughters of Mrs. M. E. Proven, Vancouver, they are both graduates of University of British Columbia. Miss Nettie Proven, who has been in Victoria for two years, hopes to return to UBC in the fall to study for her MA degree. (Photo by Goertz.)

Hosts at Mammoth Gathering

Illustrious Potentate of Gizeh Temple, Robert Johnson, and Mrs. Johnson, of Vancouver, will act as host and hostess at the mammoth Shrine gathering in Victoria June 5, 6 and 7, when hundreds of Shriners will be in the city from points in the Pacific Northwest States and Canada. The event will mark the golden anniversary of Gizeh Temple.

Say 'Au Revoir' to Victoria

"We'll be back," say Col. and Mrs. A. Perron, "even if it's only on leave!" With their four children, Paul, Arthur, Robert and Suzanne, and Col. Perron's sister, Miss E. W. Perron, they will leave Victoria on May 31. Miss Perron and Suzanne will go east by train while Col. and Mrs. Perron and their sons motor through the United States to Quebec City, where the family will spend a month with Mrs. Perron's family, while Col. Perron is in Ottawa. On July 15 the family will board the Cynthia at Quebec City to travel to Paris, France, where Col. Perron has been appointed military attaché. For the past five years he has been commander of Esquimalt Garrison. Next Saturday, on the eve of their departure, Col. and Mrs. Perron will celebrate their wedding anniversary.

St. Luke's Church Scene Of Cornish-Jenner Wedding

Spring flowers formed a set-offers. Reception was held at the home of the bride's grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Jenner, 642 Langford St. On arrival the bride-elect was presented with a corsage of red roses, her mother, Mrs. A. Mason, and the groom's mother, Mrs. H. Pearce, with carnations. Gifts were arranged in a decorated wishing well. The invited guests were Mesdames F. Reeve, R. Cartwright, E. Mutch, W. O'Keefe, A. Phillips, A. Mason, A. Mason Jr., H. Wilkinson, H. Pearce, C. Brown, R. Pearce, A. Rowe, G. Foster, F. Stewart, D. McTavish, J. Redgement, D. Pearce, D. Ferguson, R. Stewart, Misses Lynda Pearce, Lorraine Mason, Althea Redgement, Barbara Stewart and Joanne Stewart.

For a honeymoon in Vancouver and Seattle, Mrs. Cornish wore a beige linen suit with blue hat and accessories and a corsage of talisman roses.

As maid of honor, Miss Peggy Arwick wore a gown of mauve net over taffeta, with matching jacket over the bodice of brocade satin. Miss Sylvia Jenner was junior bridesmaid for her sister, wearing a gown of pale blue nylon net over taffeta. Both attendants wore flower hairdos to match their gowns and carried colonial bouquets of pink carnations and lily of the valley.

Jack Turner was best man and Barry Jenner, brother of the bride, and Ken Price were

OF PERSONAL INTEREST

Honoring Miss Hilda Mason, a June bride-to-be, a no-hostess shower was held recently at the home of Mrs. R. J. Stewart, 642 Langford St. On arrival the bride-elect was presented with a corsage of red roses, her mother, Mrs. A. Mason, and the groom's mother, Mrs. H. Pearce, with carnations. Gifts were arranged in a decorated wishing well. The invited guests were Mesdames F. Reeve, R. Cartwright, E. Mutch, W. O'Keefe, A. Phillips, A. Mason, A. Mason Jr., H. Wilkinson, H. Pearce, C. ### COLOUR

For thousands of years colours have been recognized but it was only about 250 years ago that it was realized where colours come from. White light is a mixture of all colours together. When white light falls upon green grass all colours except green are absorbed by the grass and the green colour alone is reflected to the eye. So it is with all coloured objects. Actually it is not a colour but a definite wavelength that is reflected to the eye and this wavelength produces the sensation of colour in the brain.

Most people have no difficulty in distinguishing one colour from another, but approximately 6 per cent are unable to accurately distinguish between red and green or yellow and blue. A few are totally colour-blind and cannot recognize any colour—everything that they see is grey, white or black.

ELIZABETH the Queen

By Marion Crawford
Former Governess to Her Majesty

The intimate biography of Queen Elizabeth, written by her good friend and former governess Marion Crawford, appears exclusively in the Victoria Daily Times in 28 chapters. Out of her 17 years of close association with the royal family "Crawford" has previously published "The Little Princess" and "Mother and Queen: The Story of Queen Mary."

XVII.

I often recall a make-believe game that the Princesses, especially Princess Margaret, were fond of playing when they were children. We called it "If."

Princess Margaret would prance about the playground chanting "If I could be anything I liked, Crawford, do you know what I'd be?"

"A good girl, I should think," I would reply. "Certainly a princess should be good."

"But if I weren't a princess, Crawford, I should like to be..." And she would search her lively imagination for a dozen fantastic professions, some of which she had read about in books and others that she had invented on the spot. Her images were always colorful and stimulating.

Princess Elizabeth sometimes entered the game, but she always tried to connect it with the real life outside, of which she could catch only glimpses. She was absorbed by healthy curiosity about the way other people lived, and tried to put herself in their places. Instead of playing a game, she exercised this faculty while we drove in the streets or in the country.

route—up Constitution Hill, and the traffic island into the Palace were several familiar faces. Many elderly women were among them.

"We know them," don't we, Crawford?" Princess Elizabeth would say. "But still, I wonder who they are."

There was one old lady, dressed in black, with a lean, sad face, who was always waiting at Hyde Park Corner at four o'clock on Friday afternoons as we drove down from the Palace to the Royal Lodge, Windsor.

We always took the same

"I hope she will not wait too long," the Princess would say. "She doesn't look very strong."

STRANGE WORLD

She was always interested in the "outside world" on which she considered me an authority—although to tell the truth I saw very little of it—and would ask me endless questions about it. I believe that until her marriage the Princess had no clear understanding of the way people lived outside palace walls.

It is one of the strengths of the British Constitution that the Queen sits upon the top rung of the ladder that others must climb with such endeavor, so that however high a man may mount, there is always someone above him—a man or woman who took that place, not after a lifetime of application, but by inheriting it as a natural birthright.

I would sometimes play the "If" game myself. What would Princess Elizabeth like to be and do, I often asked myself, "if" she were free to choose?

The course of her life was set. Certain things happened, always had happened, and always would continue to happen so far as she knew. A child does not ask what water tastes like, or puzzle over the way she breathes. These things are taken for granted. So, then, was Princess Elizabeth's way of living.

But on her honeymoon, and certainly afterward when she flew to visit Prince Philip in Malta, Princess Elizabeth saw and experienced for the first time the life of an ordinary girl not living in a palace.

NEVER QUITE FREE

She could never be quite free from all attention, of course, however thoughtful people are. And in Malta the citizens made a genuine effort not to cloud her

CUTS BUILDING COSTS

WEATHERPROOF ... WON'T BURN ... CUTS COSTS ... ADDS STRENGTH

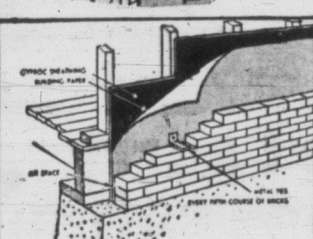

GYPROC SHEATHING is the practical, fire-protective sheathing for use with wood siding, reinforced stucco, brick or other masonry veneer. It is economical, easy to handle and quickly erected. GYPROC SHEATHING is sawn and pailed like lumber, with practically no waste. Edges fit snugly, forming rigid, wind-resistant, well-braced walls.

GYPROC SHEATHING meets the requirements of Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation building standards. Available through Builder's Supply and Lumber Dealers across Canada.

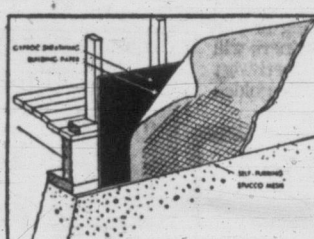

GYPROC is a registered trademark for your protection. Manufactured only by

Gypsum, Lime and Alabastine, Canada, Limited

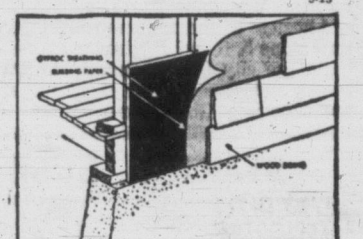

VANCOUVER CALGARY WINNIPEG
TORONTO - 5 MONTREAL - 2

BRICK VENEER
The GYPROC Sheathing is covered with building paper. A 3/4" to 1" air space is formed between brick veneer and building paper. Gyproc Sheathing is applied over brickwork.

REINFORCED STUCCO
Crystalline reinforcement is erected horizontally with self-forming strips in contact with building paper. All horizontal and vertical joints are lapped at least 2". Additional 12" angle strips are erected vertically at all external corners.

WOOD SIDING
Wood siding is nailed through the Sheathing into every stud. End joints of siding are located over studs, with double studs at sides of openings and at corners to allow solid nailing for trim and ends of siding.

Build Sidewalls of Lifetime Beauty

Thrilling new pastel colors and fine texture make Dur-O-Shake today's most beautiful siding. Large 4-foot units go up quickly... are applied to your home in deep, generous courses to give sweeping shadow lines. Dur-O-Shake is applied over sheathing in new homes, or over existing sidewalls in old homes.

It is a permanent siding... weather-proof, rot-proof, fire-safe. Never needs paint or stain. Built on heavy insulating board, it insulates as well as beautifies. See Dur-O-Shake insulating sidings in Foam Green, Silver White and Golden-Tone, at your nearest Sidney Products dealer or applicator.

YOUR WEEK'S WORK

FLOWERS—Hand weed annuals and perennials to avoid damage to plants. Thin out annuals sown outdoors. Plan summer bedding schemes, and complete planting by end of month, except with tender subjects such as begonias and zinnias. Finish sowing biennials for next spring flowering.

These include wallflower, Canterbury bells, Brompton stock, myosotis. Prepare flowering house plants for summering in the garden. Hibiscus, oleander, azalea, agapanthus, crinum, are a few which may be placed in a sheltered position on a porch or similar place to become hardened to outdoors before placing in open garden.

pruning of early spring flowering shrubs as previously outlined.

Question Box

Q.—We plan to fertilize our snade trees. What is the recommended amount?

A.—A general rule is to use three pounds of a 5-10-5, 4-12-4 or 6-10-4 fertilizer for each inch of trunk diameter, measured waist high. Be sure to get it deep into the soil, 15 inches or deeper.

Q.—Is it possible for the home gardener to propagate rhododendrons from cuttings?

A.—While commercial nurserymen do propagate from leaf cuttings, it is a job for the expert and a greenhouse is necessary to control the temperature and moisture in the air.

Q.—Last summer's crop of potatoes was badly infected with scab. What can be done to eliminate this disease?

A.—Scab can be licked by a generous application of sulphur and a two-year crop rotation. A single application will last up to four years. Potatoes can't be grown the first season after the treatment, and some other crops, such as corn, should be planted.

VEGETABLES—Egg plant and sweet pepper, raised indoors, may be planted into cold frame, or the open garden in sheltered districts. Sow beans, sweet corn, also successions of beets and carrots. Tomatoes may be planted out in the colder districts.

NHA Design-of-the-Month

Architect Edwin Raines, of Winnipeg, has achieved two objectives in designing this 1½-story house. To provide privacy for the prospective home-owner, he has followed the modern trend of locating the living room at the rear, overlooking the garden and lawn. Mr. Raines has also avoided sacrificing the appearance of the front of the house, which is sometimes an objection to designs featuring this type of interior layout.

A large kitchen, adequately lighted by two windows facing the front lawn, is well planned, with ample cupboard space and a useful breakfast nook. It is convenient to both the front door and the living room. The service entrance provides direct access to the basement stairway. The combination of exterior finishes used, including stucco and wood siding on the ground floor and plywood on the gables, presents an interesting effect.

The total floor area of the house is 1,121 square feet, while the cubic measurement is 17,530 cubic feet. The exterior dimensions are 28 feet by 26 feet, with a minimum lot size of 28 feet by 26 feet.

Working drawings for this house, known as Design 308, may be obtained from Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation at a minimum cost.

NATURE TALKS By ROBERT CONNELL

'The Bow in the Cloud'

As I write this I see through the window a truly magnificent rainbow and its double in the eastern sky.

After our recent showers and chilly winds it would seem to give promise of sunnier and warmer weather. In Willett's "Journal of Summertime in the Country," a small book published just over a century ago, he tells of spending 10 minutes "watching the growth and death of a rainbow," and he remarks on the calm and unpretentiousness of everything in God's visible world, "you never hear a rose growing or a tulip shooting forth its gorgeous streaks."

Certainly with all our human ingenuity there is little comparable to the "bow in the cloud" or indeed the miniature rainbow we see in the hosepipe's spray when we water the garden. Its pretty blue-green leaves are attractive in their roundish shape and their dainty little teeth that slope towards the apex. The names "Juneberry" and "service-berry" are also commonly attached to this familiar shrub of North America in its four or five species distributed from coast to coast.

On the prairies it was a valued fruit in the early days of settlement. The natives dried it and compressed it into cakes for winter use.

The Modern Trend IS TO Reliance METAL WINDOWS

They're designed for clean-cut beauty, for efficiency and lasting satisfaction. No more warped, jammed or hard-to-operate windows, no more fitting and maintenance after the job is complete. Simply install them and forget them. ### Ashes of Hard Woods, Nitrates Spur Healthy Growth of Plants

To use fertilizers successfully and economically it is essential that the gardener understand the character and the functions of the three principal plant food elements. The first, nitrogen, is taken up by the plants mainly as nitrate salts of various kinds dissolved in water. Within the plant it enters into many functions related to life and growth, especially in the formation of proteins. Since these compounds are parts of the protoplasm, of which living plant cells are composed, an application of nitrogenous fertilizer shows its effects on plant development more quickly than either of the other essential elements.

Nitrate of soda and sulphate of ammonia are the most important sources of nitrogen for plant food. The former, also called Chile saltpetre, comes from natural deposits in Chile, or is manufactured from the gaseous nitrogen of the atmosphere. It is so highly soluble, the best results are obtained when applied in small amounts every two or four weeks, rather than in one large application. Important to note is that it maintains alkalinity in the soil, or a neutral condition. Unlike nitrogen compounds, phosphorus becomes fixed when applied to the soil and is not lost in drainage water, therefore it may be applied at any time. The plants use it to ripen the tissues formed through use of nitrogen, and it is essential to the formation of good flowers, fruits and seeds. Non-injurious, it can be applied generously, and it is an excellent addition to any compost pile.

POTASH COMBINATIONS
The various potash combinations as found in soils are usually insufficient for plant growth. They are essential to the young, growing parts of the plants where cell activity is at its maximum. Other effects will be noted in the formation and transference of starches and other substances; the growth and stiffening of plant cells in stem, leaf and fruit; developing resistance to disease. Where root vegetables are being grown, an adequate supply of potash is essential.

The ashes of hard woods are rich in potash, but the percentage is less in ashes of soft woods. Sulphate and muriate of potash are two of the chemical sources. Like phosphorus, it becomes fixed in the soil and may be applied at any time, remaining available to the plant roots as needed. While any or all of these elements can be applied to the soil, or be present in the soil, they have no effect on plant growth unless they are available to the roots. And roots can only pick up liquids.

Soil moisture is essential to success with fertilizers, and the amount of moisture any soil will retain is dependent upon the amount of humus it contains. Chemical fertilizers, in conjunction with compost or manure, will result in success and economy in the home garden.

CAROL RICHARDS
ASTROLOGICAL FORECAST

MONDAY, MAY 25, 1953

Aries (March 21 to April 19)
Look where you are going financially. Take care of vital material concerns. Collect all outstanding debts, pay taxes and all bills; see about your will; attend to insurance.

Taurus (April 20 to May 20)
It is most important that you sit down to conference with everyone involved in your financial affairs. Discuss ways in which matters of mutual concern can be expedited.

Gemini (May 21 to June 21)
You must forget those tantalizing interests and stick to business. Finishing routine duties efficiently would not be possible otherwise.

Cancer (June 22 to July 21)
Make yourself as attractive as possible. See that wardrobe is correct. Your grooming faultless. Then you may enjoy intriguing pleasures with happier outcome.

Leo (July 22 to August 21)
To keep household running smoothly see that plumbing and appliances such as TV set, radio, toaster, refrigerator, washing machine and electric fixtures are in A 1 condition.

Virgo (August 22 to September 22)
Look after minute details. Resolve to take care of correspondence, accounts, tickets, statements, reports. Straighten out files.

Libra (September 23 to October 22)
Today brings a chance to increase income through vocational ability which you must develop more expertly. Take note and see just where you are headed materially.

Scorpio (October 23 to November 21)
Slow down and give some attention to your health. Physical system requires some consideration at this time. Think in terms of better health, increased sense of well-being.

Sagittarius (November 22 to December 21)
Be discreet when inquisitive individuals try to get line on your affairs. Act quietly in search of better arrangement to help yourself and those close to you.

Capricorn (December 22 to January 20)
Important, forceful friend is favorably impressed by your perseverance and gives you a boost toward your goals. Be appreciative.

Aquarius (January 21 to February 19)
Be careful in everything you say or do today. Powerful executive irks you with his demands, but comply if you want to retain your popularity and his approval.

Pisces (February 20 to March 20)
Be on the lookout for methods that will increase your prosperity. Take note of those who are successful. By adopting modern systems they achieve even higher goals.

IF YOUR CHILD IS BORN TODAY...
A child born today will display tremendous zeal in going after his or her aims. There is danger that his or her means of attaining them may occasionally fall short of ethical conduct. It is therefore essential that you instill from earliest years the highest principles and aspirations. The chart suggests a vocation which requires both nimbleness and physical dexterity—qualities possessed in good measure by this individual.

Ship's 'Foster Parents' See Weather Wonders

Students of S. J. Willis High School, who have "adopted" the weather ship St. Catherine's, were entertained aboard the ship this week, when officers and crew showed youngsters around from stem to stern. Mysteries of gathering weather data is explained to visitors

Esquimalt Songsters Record Light Opera

By MARY BELL
The Esquimalt High School choir and glee club rallied at the school Thursday to start the recording of all solos, duets, quartettes and choruses from the opera "The Bohemian Girl," produced early in March by the combined group.

Platters were recorded in strict sequence with the help of directors, Mr. W. C. Ozard and Miss M. MacKay.

Girls Y-Teens held a meeting of all girls interested in joining next year. Twenty-five enthusiastic girls turned out. They were told how Y-Teens were affiliated with the YWCA and were familiarized with the club's purpose and standards.

The Drama Club's interest now has turned to a concentrated study of drama from the ancient to the present times.

The Journalism Club announced this week that the traditional year book has gone to press and it should be ready in mid-June.

GRADUATION
Graduation ceremonies will be held this year at 8 p.m. on May 29 in the school's auditorium. Tony Walls will be the valedictorian for the event, and Major Cuthbert Holmes, Reverend J. A. Roberts and Mrs. G. A. Stelk will be the guest speakers. The school at that time will be open to the public.

A display of students' work throughout the year will follow. Works of art, woodwork and home economics will constitute the better part of the exhibition at 9.30 p.m.

The graduation class will be attended by the '53 grad class, their escorts and parents. The dance will begin at 10 to the strains of Ler Acres' orchestra and will continue till 1.

The committee working on the graduation program, under chairman Miss M. MacKay, is: Bev Ross, Eileen Hay, Donna Smith, Pat Caley, Hubert Parry, George Wright, Glen Atkinson, Clarence Christenson and Jim Morgan. The elected members from grade 12 are Dianne Sandford and Ron Smith.

At a special assembly last Friday, Mr. Temple spoke to the student body on "Citizenship and Empire Day."

GIFT TO TRAVELER
Also on the program, the district of Esquimalt honored Ed Walters, one of the Coronation delegates from Victoria, with presentations of gifts from the P.T.A., the Esquimalt Chapter of the IODE, the school staff, the students' council, and Ed's own division 1.

Gloria Molofy presented Beverly Turner with the traditional silver bracelet for being Esquimalt's representative to the annual May Queen ceremony as lady-in-waiting.

At the conclusion of the program the whole school sang "For He's a Jolly Good Fellow," an unrehearsed rendition, for Ed, who left Sunday.

Twenty Y-Teen girls, this week-end, traveled to Sunshine Camp for a taste of out-door life before school concludes for another year. They packed everything, from their uniforms, to pots and pans. Arriving on Friday night, they had two fun-packed days to hike, swim and sleep. Miss M. MacKay chaperoned the girls and also provided the only car.

A new "Coronation March" by Sir Arnold Bax, Master of the Queen's Music, winds up the 1953 Coronation service.

Records Fall As Neptune Wins EHS Meet

Eleven new records were established in Esquimalt High's inter-house track and field meet last Friday. Neptune house won the championship with 148 points. Mercury came second with 140, and Jupiter third, drawing 117.

Esquimalt girls went to Pat Lisle, senior girls; Esther Arnason, junior girls; Bill Dobbie, senior boys; and Art Moore, junior boys.

First and second placing contestants represented Esquimalt in the inter-high track meet on May 22 at Victoria High.

In the inter-high track meet, half of the events were run off Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday before the track meet Friday. Esquimalt had entries in all events and gave an excellent showing for the second smallest high school in Greater Victoria.

S. J. Willis High Displays Honor Roll

By PAT PETRIE
Many students this week gathered around the newly-mounted Honor Roll to read the names of classmates who received awards last year. The list included awards for club activities as well as scholastic work.

The Student's Council was responsible for the installation.

The latest edition of the school paper, "Hilltop Highlights," noted that all the boys on the school's safety patrol received free passes to the movie "Ivory Hunters" at the Fox Theatre, by courtesy of the manager.

Grade eight students who planned typing as a subject next year, have been given a chance to learn banking procedure in our school bank. Twelve students will be chosen to work in the school bank next year. The bank has also announced it will cash any war saving stamps students may have.

CONCERT PLANNED
There are many posters displayed about the school this week advertising the forthcoming hand concert and is under the direction of Mr. C. H. Denike.

Jerry Booth won a book prize in the recent drama festival in which he participated.

Two students have brought honor to S. J. Willis in recent activities. Teresa Graham, RD, won two tickets to the international tennis match Wednesday at the Memorial Arena for her essay on the subject "Why I Think Tennis is the Perfect Sport."

Discovery House Leads Competition

By SHARON RITCHIE
After two weeks of inter-house softball, Discovery House is in the lead at Oak Bay Junior High.

The games are played at noon-hour.

Friday, the Grade 8 party was held. There was entertainment, films and refreshments, as well as dancing.

Staff of "Obejay," the new school's paper, will have copy ready by mid-June.

St. Ann's Academy Aquinian Ready for Readers in June

By KAREN HOLM
This week, with the end of wild rushing about for last-minute ads, articles and pictures, the school annual, the "Aquinian," went to press. Copies will be ready for distribution by the first week in June, it is expected.

To Kathleen Bayly, Grade 12, go our heartfelt congratulations for the essay she submitted to the tennis contest. As a runner-up, she received two tickets to the exhibition match at the Memorial Arena Wednesday.

Last Thursday, Ascension

Thursday, students from St. Ann's and St. Louis chartered a bus and departed for the Sooke Hills for a hike. They made Otter Point their headquarters and after their picnic lunch set out as modern day "explorers" — returning only when hunger drove them back to a wiener roast. They ended the day with entertainment around the fire.

The graduating class has been in a tizzy these past few days—the cause of excitement and upset, the graduation dance to be held Friday night at the Royal Victoria Yacht Club.

Mount Douglas Students' Dance Last of Social Season Functions

By JEAN SUTHERLAND

Gay streamers and bright colored balloons decorated the auditorium for the sports day dance last Friday. This last dance of the year was sponsored by the Grade 11 class. Bob Dovey and Bob Genn were masters of ceremony for the evening of smooth dancing. As the old clock rolled around to 11.15, the boys chose their partners for the home waltz.

In the sports field this week, Douglas girls defeated Skeena in volleyball in the best of three games.

As the race for block awards nears its finish, many students are scrapping to get the needed points making them eligible for their letters. Those students heading the list at present will have keen competition from now until the end of the year.

With promising weather, the tennis tournament continues. B. Lifton, B. Clark, M. Lum, J. Sutherland, D. Woods, L. Lifton and I. Sjöberg have won their games. Among the boys B. Goodwin, B. Skillings, H. Lum, D. Glass, D. Hamilton and S.

Stout are on their way to championship play.

The big headache at Mount Doug at present is the job of putting the annual together. The staff of "Panorama" is working hard getting the picture pages ready for printing and sorting out the various articles.

Many of the students of Mount Doug went, on May 17, to see Bernice Perfect, one of Victoria's representatives to the Coronation, as she started on the first lap of her journey to London to see the Coronation.

TAKE IT FROM ME

By AMY SANDREVIC

There is an old saying that "it never rains but it pours," but I want to change it to "it never rains unless I forget my head-scarf!" The other day I got caught in the rain, and much as I dislike wearing anything on my head, a scarf would have been much appreciated. The short storm did the most shameful stunts with my hair! It wasn't content with just taking out most of the curl—it had to take all of it out. Nor was it satisfied with just soaking my hair—it had to make it all cling together in talls and drip water down my neck and into my eyes. After several hours I succeeded in drying it out and some of the curl came back, but I'm afraid that I haven't enough natural curl in my hair to look glamorous without setting. From now on I'll take the Boy Scout motto, "Be Prepared," for mine too!

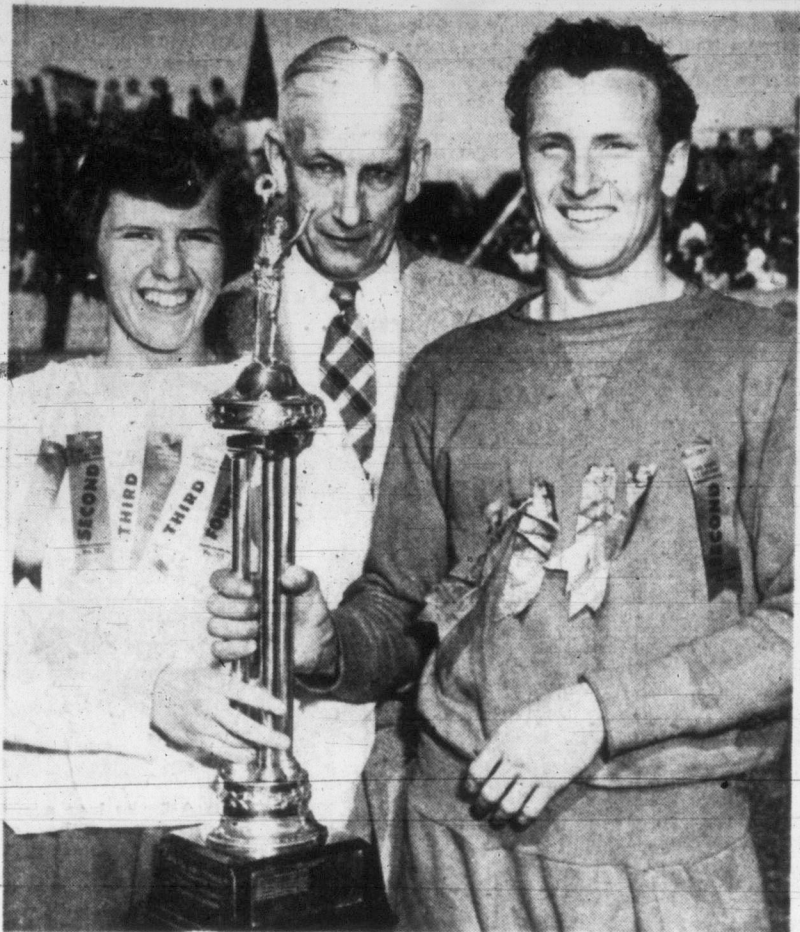

Speaking of Boy Scouts reminds me of the Girl Guides, too. It is really amazing how much valuable knowledge and experience a young person can get while having a wonderful time. These organizations not only teach youngsters and give them a "good time," but they also prevent delinquency. I've never heard of a scout or a guide being called up in juvenile court, have you?

Also, I have noticed that the Girl Guides don't get much publicity, of any kind. I was part of a Girl Guide group a few years ago and have always wished that the group had not disbanded. And for those who consider these organizations "kid's stuff," I'd like to point out that adults can benefit from them and derive great pleasure from instructing children in wood lore, Morse code, and many other fascinating arts.

A happy, broadminded, interested youth becomes a well-adjusted adult, a valuable member of any community. A little more encouragement to youth organizations would, in my opinion, do everyone much more good than the "what-is-the-youngers-generation-coming-to?" attitude. If I were over 21, I'm afraid I'd be tempted to run for Parliament on a "be kind to youth" platform.

(Bet I'd get in, too!)

To the Victors Go the Spoils

One of the most colorful events of the year-round high school sports program, the seventh annual Inter-High School Track and Field Championships concluded Friday with the presentation of trophies at Vic-High's Memorial Stadium. The host school's co-captains,

John Whan and Bev Koski, proudly hold the Roy Jones Memorial Trophy, for the meet championship, presented to them by J. F. K. English, municipal inspector of schools. (See other pictures, story, Page 9.)

FINAL DASH OVER WEEK-END

Everest Party Plans Two-Pronged Attempt

KATMANDU, Nepal (Reuters)—Four picked climbers of the British Everest expedition plan to make a two-pronged "leap frog" attempt to conquer 29,002-foot Mount Everest this week-end, according to reports reaching here today by runner from the expedition's base.

The four climbers, in two parties of two, were expected to make their assaults on the summit today and Sunday if the weather holds.

Both parties would set out from Camp No. 7 at about 25,500 feet. It was planned that two climbers would set up camp No. 8 on a ridge about 2,000 feet from the summit, where they would spend the night. The other two, equipped with the latest "closed circuit" oxygen equipment, would be sent to the peak in a day.

If they were beaten back, the second party, who will have spent the night in a tiny bivouac tent, would make their attempt Sunday morning.

They are equipped with the older-type oxygen equipment, which, though heavier, would serve them longer in the high altitudes.

If both parties fail it is expected the whole expedition will withdraw to the advanced base camp to prepare for a further attempt.

STRAITH REFUTES CHARGE

Bennett Whistling In Dark Says Liberal

Premier Bennett's charges that Victoria Liberal members of the last Legislature had lost the city $156,000 by voting down the Rolston Formula on education costs were refuted at a Friday night election meeting.

Former education minister W. T. Straith, one of three Liberal candidates seeking reelection to city seats, told an audience at the K. of P. Hall that Liberal members actually had saved the city money by their actions.

"Mr. Bennett is whistling in the dark trying to keep up his courage," Mr. Straith said. "He's whistling as loud as he can to try to make people think he's a big fellow."

"He won't be whistling after the election. "He won't have a corporal's guard in the Legislature."

Mr. Straith pointed out as part of the Rolston Formula Socreds were going to cut off payment to municipalities of their share of sales tax revenue as of next December, three months before the end of the fiscal year.

To Victoria, Mr. Straith estimated, this would mean a direct loss of $200,000.

Douks Fire Seven Homes To Protest Bennett Plan

Sons Answer Socred's 'Fooling Over' Policy

VICTORIA (CP)—Premier W. A. C. Bennett's warning to Radical Doukhobors that the "fooling around" is over was answered Friday night by a series of house fires in the Kootenay area, RCMP reported here today.

THANKSGIVING DAY OCT. 12

OTTAWA (CP)—Thanksgiving Day has been set this year as Monday, October 12, it was announced today in an extra issue of the Canada Gazette. For some years Thanksgiving has been observed on the second Monday in October.

Details of the fires were not immediately available, but first reports said two houses had been destroyed in Krestova village, headquarters of the radical Sons of Freedom Doukhobors, and five at Goose Creek. All were Sons of Freedom dwellings.

Krestova, in the Kootenays near Nelson, B.C., 350 miles east of Vancouver, has been the scene of many fires over the years.

Fire is a Doukhobor form of protest, and it is not uncommon for the "Sons" to put the torch to their own homes.

Premier Bennett issued his warning to the radical Doukhobors Friday when he announced an eight-point program in an effort to settle a problem that has plagued British Columbia for 50 years.

A relocation plan has been under study, with the possibility of the Doukhobors emigrating to Central America.

The religious sect numbers about 2,000 of the some 10,000 Doukhobors in the Kootenays.

Fresh Flood Threat Faced In Louisiana

15,000 Homeless; $10 Million Damage

LAKE CHARLES, La. (AP)—A sleepless weatherman warned today the cresting Calcasieu River would keep pouring flood waters another four or five days through this city and eastern outskirts where 15,000 persons fled their homes.

The flood-crippled area, with hundreds of homes in backwater up to window level, counted damage at $10,000,000.

Week-long floods throughout Louisiana have caused a loss estimated at more than $100,000,000 and at least eight drownings. No casualties were reported here, but residents were advised to get typhoid shots.

While the creeping backwaters swirled through one-third of this southwest Louisiana city, the waters spilling into low-lying neighborhoods appeared to be leveling off, but not falling.

MAY USE DYNAMITE

A decision was expected on whether to relieve conditions by dynamiting holes in the east-west highway. The road, built on an embankment in swamp land, dams the south-bound flood waters.

Orange, Tex., an industrial city of 10,000 some 35 miles southwest of here on Highway 90, was threatened by the rising waters of the Sabine River which divides the two states.

Weatherman Paul Cook said "Lake Charles will just have to sit here four or five more days with this flood at or near its peak."

He said an immense amount of southward flowing water was still piled up in miles of swamplands north of the city.

Accident-Free Motorists Win Insurance Cut

Accident-free Vancouver Island motorists today can buy collision insurance for less money.

B.C. Underwriters Association has extended its 20 per cent no-claims discount to collision coverage. Heretofore the "safe driver" bonus applied only to property damage and public liability coverages.

Cost of $100 deductible collision insurance on late model autos will be cut by $8.20 for Vancouver Island motorists; $50 deductible will cost $10 less.

The no-claims discount is retroactive to April 1, Percy Baird, Vancouver, B.C. Underwriters Association secretary, said this forenoon.

This is the second no-claims-for-three-years bonus granted by the auto insurance companies this year.

On April 1 cost of public liability and property damage insurance was cut 20 per cent provided the car was used for pleasure only, was driven by no one under 25, and the insured had a three-year accident-free record.

Weathermen Fail to Warn Of Tornado

TORONTO (BUP)—No tornado warning was issued in southwestern Ontario Thursday night because authorities feared it might create panic, a weather office spokesman said today.

Forecaster K. T. McLeod said another reason was that it was mathematically impossible to predict where the twister would hit.

A number of tornado victims in Sarnia said the first indication they had of the approaching big blow came from the U.S. Weather Bureau in Michigan which issued an urgent warning.

McLeod said the weather office knew Thursday morning that conditions were conducive to tornadoes because of instability of air masses.

SC Principles Felt in Heart

WINNIPEG (CP)—Rev. E. G. Hansell, Social Credit Member of Parliament for Macleod, said Friday night that party supporters don't have to understand the principles of Social Credit as long as they feel it in their hearts.

He spoke at a campaign meeting in support of Social Credit candidates in the June 8 Manitoba election.

Gunmen Loot Edmonton Bank

Hooded Thugs Escaped With Money Estimated Between $20-$25,000

(Compiled From CP, BUP Dispatches) EDMONTON (CP)—Four black-hooded gunmen today held up and robbed the Jasper Avenue Treasury Branch of the Alberta Government and escaped with an unknown amount of money. One official report said the bandits made off with an estimated $20,000 to $25,000.

Assistant bank manager Gordon Self said the four entered the branch 40 minutes after the 9 a.m. opening. One bandit stationed himself at the door. Another pointed a gun at Mr. Self and two others vaulted a counter.

One man rifled a teller's cage, holding Madeleine Schreffels at gunpoint. No shots were fired. The men were in the building about five minutes and escaped in a car waiting outside. They wore coveralls, jackets and black hoods, Mr. Self said.

SCUFFLED WITH THUGS R. E. Stark, an accountant, was in the vault when the bandits entered. He emerged from the vault and saw only the one man rifling the teller's cage. Mr. Stark scuffled with the man and suffered head and face bruises when the bandit struck him with his fist.

Only the one teller's cage was entered. Bank officials could give no accurate description of the men but said all were "in their 30s."

The Royal Canadian Mounted Police was called into the manhunt as it was believed the three gunmen fleeing in a late model green car were heading out of the city for northern Alberta.

City police Chief Reg Jennings said first reports indicated "at least $25,000" was stolen in the robbery. Within three blocks of city police headquarters and on Edmonton's main street, but the loot might be considerably higher.

"We don't know yet as the branch is checking now," he said. The RCMP alerted all its detachments in northern Alberta to watch for the get-away car.

Mountainers say much damage on the working of the oxygen equipment.

Liberals, CCF Attack Monetary Reform

"Canada is in the forefront of nations which can benefit from new investment," he said.

Social Credit is undermining the foundations of our prosperity by scaring off prospective capital with their fiscal theories.

Speaking in an area of small logging operation, the Liberal leader said he was happy the province finally is being developed in depth.

He told groups of small operators here and at Vanderhoof and Fort St. James their problems would get particular attention from a Royal Commission on forestry which Liberals would set up.

No more forest management licenses would be granted to big operators until such a commission reported, he said.

Gibbs Says Theory Means Dictatorship Social Credit monetary reform theories were examined by P. A. Gibbs, Oak Bay Liberal candidate, Friday night at Cadboro Bay Scout Hall, and his conclusion was: The system is operable only under a Fascist dictatorship.

Royal Serenade

Like thousands of young ladies the world over, Princess Margaret Rose is an enthusiastic fan of U.S. radio singer Eddie Fisher. At a recent charity ball, in London's Dorchester Hall, Fisher sang three songs especially for the Princess. Observers said she looked happier than at any time since the death of her father.

Hutchison Wins Award For Biography

LONDON, Ont. (CP)—Award of medals to two Canadians for books published in 1952 was announced Friday by the governor-general's awards board of the Canadian Authors' Association.

Lawrence Earl, former war correspondent and now a magazine writer in England, wins the Leacock Medal for humor with "The Battle of Balingass," a report on a fantastic fight put up by a village in Eire to see justice done in its post office.

Mr. Earl is a native of Saint John, N.B., and the author of a previous book "Yangtze Incident."

Bruce Hutchison, Victoria newspaper man, wins the University of British Columbia Medal for popular biography with "The Incredible Canadian," his biography of Mackenzie King. He recently won a National Newspaper Award for a series of editorials in the Victoria Times.

The book awards were announced here by Dr. Frank Stilling, chairman of the governor-general's awards board.

Refugees Fired On

FINAL BULLETINS

Mystery Painting Returned

VANCOUVER (CP)—The Vancouver Art Gallery's stolen, Constable painting titled "Hearne Bay" has been returned, more of a mystery than ever.

Painted by John Constable in the 19th century, the painting disappeared from the gallery's walls more than a year ago. It was valued at $750.

Budge Patty Crushed in Upset

PARIS (AP)—Tiny Felicissimo Ampon of the Philippines scored the first big upset in the French international tennis championships today, crushing Budge Patty of Los Angeles, 6-4, 6-2, 6-4.

The temperature in the concrete central court at Roland Garros Stadium was near 100 degrees and Patty obviously was suffering from the heat. He has been ill recently with tonsillitis.

Canadian Aluminum Sought in U.S.

NEW YORK (AP)—The Aluminum Company of America today confirmed reports that it plans to buy about 1,250,000, 000 pounds of Canadian aluminum over the next six years.

The metal would be purchased from Aluminium Ltd., parent company of the Aluminum Company of Canada. Deliveries would extend through 1958.

Retroactive Cheques Total $500

VANCOUVER (CP)—Jubilant seamen today estimated retroactive pay cheques, under the contract settlement plan reached in Montreal, will total $500 each for many of the 700 members of the Seafarers' International Union, AFL.

The settlement which averted the threatened strike of B.C. coastal steamships, calls for a $30 monthly wage increase, retroactive to June 1, 1952.

Salmon Operators Hike Proposals

VANCOUVER (CP)—B.C. salmon operators have made slight increases in their price proposals for the 1953 catch as they continued negotiations here with the TLC United Fishermen and Allied Workers Union.

They increased the sockeye offer from 18 to 19 cents a pound and proposed 6½ cents a pound for pink in place of the 6½-cent original offer.

STRAITH REFUTES CHARGE

Bennett Whistling In Dark Says Liberal

Premier Bennett's charges that Victoria Liberal members of the last Legislature had lost the city $156,000 by voting down the Rolston Formula on education costs were refuted at a Friday night election meeting.

Former education minister W. T. Straith, one of three Liberal candidates seeking reelection to city seats, told an audience at the K. of P. Hall that Liberal members actually had saved the city money by their actions.

"Mr. Bennett is whistling in the dark trying to keep up his courage," Mr. Straith said.

"He's whistling as loud as he can to try to make people think he's a big fellow."

"He won't be whistling after the election."

"He won't have a corporal's guard in the Legislature."

The premier's charge, made at a Royal Theatre rally Thursday night, that the city would be out of pocket because of the Rolston Formula rejection, was a "film flim" according to the former minister.

"Mr. Bennett, with tongue-in-cheek, said his government was going to give the city $156,000."

What he didn't say was that before they did that they were going to steal $200,000 which rightfully is coming to this city through the 3 per cent sales tax. No, he didn't tell you that. He wouldn't want you to see we'd be losing $44,000 on the deal."

Mr. Straith pointed out as part of the Rolston Formula Soerders were going to cut off payment to municipalities of their share of sales tax revenue as of next December, three months before the end of the fiscal year.

To Victoria, Mr. Straith estimated, this would mean a direct loss of $200,000.

THANKSGIVING DAY OCT. 12

OTTAWA (CP)—Thanksgiving Day has been set this year as Monday, October 12, it was announced today in an extra issue of the Canada Gazette.
